Ford closes in on front-runner Smitherman in mayoral race

Penny-pinching, bombastic Coun. Rob Ford has quickly surged into second place in Toronto's mayoral race, within striking distance of front-runner George Smitherman, according to a Toronto Star-Angus Reid poll.

"Rob Ford has reshuffled the deck," mostly at the expense of a stalled Rocco Rossi, said Jodi Shanoff, senior vice-president of Angus Reid Public Opinion.

The online poll of 413 Torontonians, conducted between last Thursday and Monday, puts Smitherman at 34 per cent support, followed by Ford at 27 per cent. The margin of error is plus or minus 4.8 per cent, 19 times out of 20.

Despite the startling surge by Ford — best known for spending his own money on his council office budget and for embarrassing public outbursts — Shanoff cautioned that a full 51 per cent of respondents are undecided.

With more than six months until the election, "the field is still open."

Ford, who registered as a candidate March 25 and drew 1,600 people to a campaign launch party the next night, has filled a vacuum in the race on the right side of the political spectrum, Shanoff said, while Smitherman and Rossi duke it out on the centre-right.

The biggest disappointment in the numbers is for Rossi, a former executive and Liberal party fundraiser who bounded from obscurity with a big speech and lots of policy in late January. His 13 per cent support is down by two points from mid-January.

Death cheats scam victim of victory

LOTTERY Even in the last months of her life, Lorraine Teicht could not fully trust people. She could never get over how three of her workmates had once turned on her.

Suspicious that she had filched a $5.7-million 6-49 lottery ticket that rightfully belonged to all four, they hired a private eye to see if her lifestyle had dramatically changed.

When police finally charged Hafiz Malik in December 2007, the victory was bittersweet and too late.

Three and a half years earlier, the Dupont Street convenience kiosk owner had told her that her ticket was not a winner, then went on to claim it as his own.

She had wanted to attend Malik's sentencing hearing at Old City Hall provincial court Thursday to read out her victim impact statement.

But she died of cancer April 5 at age 56.

Canada made a Great Escape, Statistics Canada says

RECESSION In most of the world it's still known as The Great Recession, but in Canada it may go down as The Great Escape.

While the rest of the world reeled from an economic and financial tsunami that threatened to spiral into the worst disaster since the 1930s, good policies and good planning appear to have sheltered Canada from the worst.

22 Canada's was really an export recession, said Statistics Canada, noting that export earnings fell a massive 22 per cent in 2009, and corporate profits plunged 33 per cent.

Statistics Canada's official report on the 2008-2009 slump shows it was a most ordinary recession in Canada, in fact, even milder than the two previous economic dips.

Exports fell, more than 400,000 jobs were lost and company profits plunged, but it could have been so much worse, the agency concludes.

According to the federal agency, Canada did suffer through a technical recession — a 3.3 per cent drop in gross domestic product over three quarters between the fall of 2008 and the summer of 2009.

But that was shorter and milder than the six-quarter slump of 1981-82 in which GDP fell 4.9 per cent, or the four-quarter 1991-92 downturn, which resulted in a 3.4 per cent fall-off.

Recessions are mostly felt by those who lose their jobs, and on this measure the latest downturn was especially mild. The agency said employment declined just 1.8 per cent in the recent recession, compared with 3.2 per cent in 1991-92 and five per cent in 1981-82.

Polish-Canadians mourn deadly crash

MEMORIAL Thousands of Polish-Canadians gathered for a mass Thursday to mark Canada's national day of mourning following a plane crash that claimed the lives of Poland's president and 95 others.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper was to attend the service led by Toronto Archbishop Thomas Collins at St. Maximillian Kolbe church in Mississauga.

Earlier this week Harper declared Thursday a national day of mourning to stand in solidarity with the Polish community as they deal with the loss.

"It's a symbolic gesture but a very important one for Polish Canadians and all Canadians," said Rev. Pawel Ratajczak, director of Catholic Youth Studio.

"It's a day to mourn but also a day to be thankful."

Polish President Lech Kaczynski, his wife and 94 others — including many high-ranking government and military officials — died Saturday when the plane went down while trying to land in dense fog at Smolensk in western Russia.

TTC defends Miller airtime

The TTC is defending the use of its public address system by Mayor David Miller, who has recorded an announcement urging riders to push the premier to restore $4 billion in funding for Toronto's Transit City light rail lines.

"It is 100 per cent appropriate. It has zero cost. We need to save Transit City and this is a way to support citizen and rider-led initiatives to save Transit City," said TTC chair Adam Giambrone.

The TTC has, in the past, run campaigns thanking the province for supporting transit.

"The TTC is owned by the city and the premier is welcome to use any provincial resources to convey his message. They certainly spend money on advertising to convey their policies, and these announcements by comparison are cost-neutral," he said.

The announcements began running Thursday and will continue through Monday, when the message goes into the regular rotation of the TTC safety and marketing announcements, said TTC spokesman Brad Ross.

Save Transit City posters will also be appearing today. The cost of those, about $43,000, is being borne by the mayor's office, the city and the TTC. A final breakdown is still to be determined, said Ross. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woman ambushed near home

Suspected hammer attack leads to attempted-murder charge

A Brampton man has been charged with attempted murder in connection with a violent attack on a woman outside her west-end Toronto apartment.

Police say the 31-year-old woman was ambushed Thursday morning in the parking lot of her apartment complex.

They say her attacker used a heavy object as a weapon, adding they believe it was a hammer.

The man fled with the woman's 2½-year-old son, but later turned the child over to police, unharmed.

Toronto police Supt. Ron Taverner said the woman was taken to Sunnybrook Hospital and has undergone surgery for a life-threatening injury to her head.

Police have charged a 35-year-old Brampton man with attempted murder, assault with weapon and abduction. His name has not been released but he is expected to appear in court on April 16.

CARLOS OSORIO/THE CANADIAN PRESS

An officer loads a backpack into a cruiser at the scene where police say a man attacked a woman and took her child in the city's west end. A suspect has turned himself in and the child is safe.

"I would say it's an ambush. This lady was ambushed in the parking lot," said Taverner.

The woman's keys and sunglasses were left at the scene, near a pool of blood from the attack.

The man reportedly surrendered to police in nearby Peel Region about an hour after the attack. The child was recovered unharmed but was taken to Etobicoke General Hospital as a precaution.

Neighbours said the woman moved into the building about a year ago, and a man moved in with her a month ago.

At the time of the attack, police on the scene said they believed the man and woman knew each other.

Hydro hiked $350 a year: Critics

POWER A $350-a-year hike is in store for the average Ontario household's hydro bill, critics said Thursday as they warned that figure could double once the province's green energy subsidies are rolled out.

An eight per cent increase in domestic electricity costs announced Thursday is the latest in a series of fees that will drive up costs, and that's before the subsidies, the Opposition said.

"It is reaching the point, not all at once but incrementally, just like a leaking faucet, that the sink is going to overflow," said Progressive Conservative energy critic John Yakabuski.

$7.60 The Ontario Energy Board said the new prices, which amount to about $7.60 a month and take effect May 1, apply to homes that don't have so-called smart meters, devices that record time-of-day usage. Those with the meters will see a more modest increase of 5.8 per cent, or about $5.79 per month.

"People in this province are seeing increases that are putting them at the point where they can no longer cope with the prices of energy, and we haven't seen them all."

News in brief

DRUGS The province's independent pharmacists stepped up their campaign against the elimination of professional allowances paid to pharmacists by generic drug makers with a full-page ad in major newspapers Thursday. The ads urge consumers to fight the provincial plan to cut at least $750 million from the drug store industry's revenues Large drug store chains like Shoppers Drug Mart have been grabbing headlines with their threats to cut hours and services, but the independent pharmacists, who make up about half of Ontario's pharmacies, say they'll be disproportionately hurt by the cuts. Globalive CEO pans 'fear-mongering' from competitors

TELECOM Globalive's chairman and CEO said Thursday that rivals of his company's new Wind Mobile wireless service are "fear-mongering" with complaints about its foreign investors.

Anthony Lacavera, who heads Canada's newest national wireless carrier, said Thursday that the industry's three established players — Rogers, Bell Mobility and Telus — are trying to stifle competition within the country and are using Wind Mobile as a target.

Anthony Lacavera

"The incumbents are using this very important question of Canadian sovereignty and culture ... in order to actually create an issue with respect to telecom's infrastructure," Lacavera said after delivering a speech at the Empire Club in Toronto.

Wind Mobile has major investment from Egyptian-based Orascom Telecom Holding, which has caused some of Wind's rivals to complain that it doesn't qualify under Canadian ownership rules.

Ash disrupts local travellers

11 flights cancelled in GTA due to volcanic activity in Iceland

Canadian air carriers have cancelled dozens of overseas flights from across Canada as a cloud of volcanic ash continues to scuttle air travel across northern Europe.

Air Canada says it has cancelled all flights to and from London's Heathrow airport, Charles de Gaulle airport in Paris and the Frankfurt airport until further notice.

Air Transat has nixed all flights to Heathrow.

Airports across Europe were forced to close after an erupting volcano in Iceland spewed a treacherous ash cloud, closing all air space over Britain, Ireland and the Nordic countries.

Experts say the ash, comprised of bits of sand and glass the consistency of talcum powder, compromises pilot visibility and aircraft engines.

Both Air Canada and Air Transat are advising travellers to check their websites for future flight status updates.

The disruption that stranded tens of thousands of people in Europe began to trickle down to Canada as the day progressed.

Just a handful of cancellations were reported at Canadian airports early Thursday, but the number had swollen to more than 30 by late afternoon.

The Greater Toronto Airports Authority said a total of 11 flights were cancelled, while authorities at the Aeroport de Montreal said nine of its flights were scrapped.

The volcanic cloud scrubbed six flights in and out of the Vancouver airport, four in Calgary and one in Halifax.

A volcano beneath Iceland's Eyjafjallajokull glacier began erupting Wednesday for the second time in less than a month, triggering floods and shooting smoke and steam kilometres into the air. About 700 people from rural areas near the volcano were evacuated Thursday because of flooding.

Video showed spectacular images of hot gases melting the thick ice, sending cascades of water thundering down the steep slopes of the volcano. Rivers swelled three metres in hours.

Specialized video game eyed as stroke treatment

HEALTH Canadian researchers have high hopes for a new type of video game that could potentially change the way stroke sufferers receive treatment, while empowering therapists to either work with their patients longer or see more people every day.

Researchers at the Toronto Rehabilitation Institute and game designers at Algoma University in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., some 690 kilometres apart, are working on a project that falls within a growing genre called "serious games," video games that aren't designed with entertainment primarily in mind, said Dwayne Hammond, a strategic adviser at Algoma.

Wii

- A recent Canadian study found therapy involving Nintendo Wii motion-controlled games were more beneficial to stroke patients than the block-stacking Jenga game and playing cards.

Therapists are already using off-the-shelf video games to help patients recover after a stroke.

That idea, which turned into the product the team is working on today, involved a therapist using paper cards to help patients exercise their brains.

The exercise had already proven effective but the team realized it could get better by going digital.

The team hopes that in about a year their software will be in a commercialized state with a bolstered number of applications for patients and therapists.

Poutine-eating showdown in Toronto

Quebec dish to test mettle of U.S. hot-dog downing stars

PETER MCCABE/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE PHOTO

Drummondville, Que., has been holding an annual poutine festival since 2008 to reinforce its claim as the true birthplace of poutine against rival town Warwick.

One of Quebec's cultural symbols has been called everything from disgusting, to heart-attack inducing, to delectable.

But can the popular Quebecois dish known as poutine — that messy mix of french fries, sauce and cheese curds — now be considered a gooey source of Canada-wide pride?

When a gang of professional "eaters" from the United States and a handful of Canadian amateurs battle for the world poutine-eating championship, it won't go down in Montreal, Quebec City, or anywhere else in la belle province. It will be held in, of all places, Toronto.

For the poutine-eating contest, three Canadians will be selected through a sweepstakes to join the race. In an ironic twist, Quebec laws don't allow its residents to apply.

No longer seen as just working-class grub from small-town Quebec, poutine now has fans across Canada and beyond. The concoction has been integrated into haute cuisine and has secured niches under the bright lights of the Big Apple and Los Angeles.

"I think it shows that poutine has become a national meal," Charles-Alexandre Theoret, author of the 2007 book Maudite poutine! ("Damned poutine!") said of the upcoming all-you-can-eat showdown on May 22 at BMO Field in Toronto. "It was once a Quebec meal, but now it's everywhere."

"I know that Montreal maybe feels like poutine is theirs, but we are going to be crowning a champion in Canada, and I think that's the most important thing because poutine certainly is Canadian first and foremost," he said.

What it's all about

- All-you-can-eat showdown: May 22 at BMO Field in Toronto.
- A dozen stars of Major League Eating, a circuit best known for its stomach-turning, rapid-fire hot dog eating contests, will have 10 minutes to wolf down as much poutine as they can.
- The champ wins a modest sum of $750 and bragging rights.
- Organizers considered joints in Montreal to serve the fare, but eventually chose Smoke's Poutinerie, a Toronto-based chain.

Pumping up fairness

Ottawa will crack down on the gas station gougers

Federal Industry Minister Tony Clement has announced legislation aimed at cracking down on gas station operators who overcharge customers.

Clement says government studies have found that six per cent of the time, pumps are not properly calibrated for the advertised price and most of the time — four per cent — it's the operator who benefits.

His Fairness at the Pumps Act will increase checks on the industry and hike the possible fines for violations.

"We expect this will reduce the amount of inaccuracy that is hitting consumers at the pumps," Clement told reporters.

He said it's up to gas-pump operators to ensure pumps are properly calibrated.

Under the proposed legislation, there will be regular checks by trained and certified inspectors.

He said there has been a number of cases over the last few years where gas station owners have been charged.

"The gas pump operator or owner was trying to chisel the consumer," Clement said at a news conference at a gas equipment and supply company in Port Coquitlam, B.C.

He said people have the right to know what they're paying for.

"I know it's a small percentage of gas station operators but to all those chisellers who might be listening in, we're coming after you," he said.

"We're going to be fining you, we're going to be inspecting you and we just will not tolerate this."

The legislation will also apply to retail food scales.

The Fairness at the Pumps Act will increase the current $1,000 fine for violations to $10,000 for a first offence and up to $50,000 for repeat offenders. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charest denies he changed rules

QUEBEC Premier Jean Charest is denying claims he has changed the rules for appointing judges to Quebec courts.

An aide to Quebec's justice minister has told the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir that Charest allows cabinet members to see lists of candidates for judicial appointments before a final decision is made.

That's a big change to a practice in place since 1979, in which cabinet sees only the name of the person chosen.

Charest says the aide made a mistake and he has not changed the appointment process since taking power in 2003.

Opposition members are accusing Charest of allowing cabinet members to lobby on behalf certain judicial candidates.

Charest has launched a public inquiry into allegations made by a former justice minister that party fundraisers influenced judicial appointments. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New charge for ex-choirmaster

ABUSE A former Anglican choirmaster in Kingston has been charged with another sex crime.

John Gallienne, 65, was arrested in Ottawa.

In 1990, Gallienne pleaded guilty to 20 sex crimes, and two years later, pleaded guilty to three more sex charges.

In 1994, he was convicted of victimizing a choirboy in B.C. and was sentenced to six years in prison. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Another letter threatens B.C. oil industry

MYSTERY Another anonymous letter that appears to threaten the oil and gas industry has been sent to a local media outlet in Dawson Creek, in the heart of northeastern British Columbia's oil and gas country.

The letter, which has been turned over to RCMP, says the "timeout is over" and warns that a "long and hot summer is coming," according to reports.

There have been six unsolved pipeline bombings targeting Calgary-based Encana's operations near Dawson Creek, since October 2008. Investigators are trying to determine whether the letter is from the same person who sent previous ones. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Guergis a party girl?

Source calls relationship a 'soap opera'

Helena Guergis may have nurtured the image of a straitlaced cabinet minister on Parliament Hill, but people who knew her in younger days paint a picture of a regular club-goer often seen on the arm of a hometown playboy.

It's similar to the picture being painted of Guergis by recent allegations that she and her husband Rahim Jaffer were photographed in a compromising situation with cocaine and hookers.

The allegations, and others related to offshore accounts, led to her expulsion from the Conservative caucus as the Mounties were called in to investigate.

Much of the attention has been focused on Jaffer, a former MP who had a reputation as a bon vivant and was convicted of careless driving after an incident last September.

But Guergis, who often appeared around Ottawa with her hair in a bun and a crucifix on her necklace, was no wallflower either.

SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Former cabinet minister Helena Guergis was expelled by the prime minister after various allegations surfaced.

Sources say Guergis was in a serious relationship in the late '90s with a well-known playboy in Barrie, Ont., a promoter who was a fixture in the local party scene and later owned a popular local strip club.

A source who knew both Shane Alkerton and Guergis well told The Canadian Press their love affair was a tumultuous "soap opera" that spanned many years, but ended before she entered politics.

A friend of Alkerton said Guergis was well-known as a "debutante" in the area because of her wealthy family, whose members were heavily involved in local politics.

Chris Beleskey said she was one of the only steady girlfriends the "wild guy" Alkerton had at the time, with a bevy of club "groupies" passing in and out of his life.

"Shane was a very popular guy, a good-looking guy, he had all the connections to parties and clubs and whatnot, and Helena was the kind of girl that if she wanted to go somewhere, she didn't want to wait in line or anything," said Beleskey.

Beleskey added he didn't see Guergis involved in drugs, but "she would come out to the clubs, and at the clubs there were people doing drugs.

Hey, big spender

Interim Rights and Democracy chief under fire for hefty bills

The interim head of Rights and Democracy spent more than $380,000 in 66 days in a bid to quell a staff rebellion at the trouble-plagued agency.

Jacques Gauthier spent the money on two separate law firms, private investigators, forensic auditors and public-relations experts.

Gerard Latulippe, Gauthier's permanent replacement as president of the agency, revealed the price tag — which could rise further — during testimony at the Commons foreign affairs committee.

He says the information gleaned by the various investigations launched by Gauthier, who remains on the board of Rights and Democracy, will be used in court proceedings launched by three senior managers who were fired.

The once-respected agency has been in turmoil since January, when hostility between staff and government-appointed board members boiled over following the death of former president Remy Beauregard.

Greenpeace activists, dressed in business suits and wearing smoke stack hats, "greenwash" BP's Calgary headquarters with large letters spelling out "TAR SANDS" in Calgary on Thursday. The demonstration was staged to bring attention to alleged environmental damage caused by mining oilsands and was held on the same day as the company's annual meeting in London.

Canada to wait for U.S. cue on climate control system

Environment Minister Jim Prentice says he doesn't expect the United States to act this year on a cap-and-trade system to control climate change and probably not next year, either.

"At this point, my assessment is that it's unlikely that the U.S. Senate will introduce or pass cap-and-trade legislation in this year, possibly, even unlikely, next year," Prentice told the Senate committee on energy, the environment and natural resources. Prentice says that means Canada won't move, either, since Ottawa is committed to harmonizing its emissions-control policies with the U.S.

Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean speaks with a couple of young African children while visiting a daycare facility in the Ouakam district of Dakar, Senegal, Africa on Thursday.

Jean not sure of next career move

Michaëlle Jean laughed off a question Thursday about whether she might consider entering politics after her term as Governor General expires.

During the first full day of her state visit to Senegal, an African journalist asked the Governor General whether she might be considering a career in politics upon leaving Rideau Hall later this year.

Jean chuckled before answering.

There are many ways someone can make a difference in the world, she replied — and they're not all exclusive to holders of public office.

"When you're a woman of action like me, what you hope to do is to always use your energy wherever you can make a difference," she told a news conference at the presidential palace.

"And I don't see any hierarchy in places where you can contribute."

Jean worked to open battered women's shelters in the 1970s, taught at university, and then worked in journalism before taking on her current role, she said.

She noted that journalists can help shine a light on social problems, and says she has tried using her time as Governor General to draw attention to similar issues in Canada and abroad. Jean hinted that her next career will also involve some form of public advocacy.

"What will I do after? It will certainly be in that same spirit, motivated by the same values, elsewhere," she said.

Given just two questions at a news conference with Jean and their president, Abdoulaye Wade, local journalists used one of them to quiz Canada's viceroy about her future plans.

Slavery tour

- Jean planned to tour an old slave-trading post Friday just off the coast of Senegal. A descendant of African slaves herself, Jean hoped to use her visit there to argue that slavery remains a modern-day scourge that needs to be defeated.

One good term doesn't deserve another: New poll

OPINION A new poll suggests that just over half of Canadians think departing Gov.-Gen. Michaëlle Jean has done a good or excellent job in office.

But the poll also indicates that less than half want to see her term extended.

She says she'll be leaving when her appointment expires in September.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima poll finds that 56 per cent of respondents feel she has done a good or excellent job, with 28 per cent calling her performance fair and seven per cent describing it as poor.

Only 48 per cent said her tenure should be extended.

The poll surveyed just over 1,000 people April 8-10 and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points, 19 times in 20.

When in Rome, learn from Romans

UrbanCompass

After a week in Rome, I wonder what Toronto can learn from the eternal city. The streets here are filled with people, yet apart from churches and monuments, there are no structures higher than five or six storeys. This is a city without highrises. Buildings are so compact that densities are very high, and that density feeds the vibrant street life.

Most shops are tiny by North American standards. The place where we buy fruits and vegetables, including succulent blood oranges, is no larger than a closet. Our local "supermarket" is a rabbit warren of small spaces, altogether the size of the average corner store in Toronto.

Toronto could use more compact density, not of the highrise variety, but low- to medium-rise. The streets would be more active and city life much more pleasant.

There are so many layers of history here. Just outside the stylish Piazza Navona one finds the remnants of the wall that Roman emperor Domitian built in the first century after Christ as a sports field. Gaudy, gigantic St. Peter's Basilica, brimming with tourists as the Catholic Church muddles through its sins, can trace its historic roots back 2,000 years to a grave excavated several decades ago right under the dome. The layers of historical artifacts have wreaked havoc during the construction of the subway system.

Toronto can't compete with that kind of historical layering, but we could be more serious about protecting and respecting the limited amount of history we do have, so something might be around in 200 years, let alone 2,000 years.

Rome can also learn from Toronto. Here, too many buildings are covered with graffiti for the first three metres above grade. The exterior of some subway cars is all graffiti. It makes the city feel unkempt and its public space uncared for. Toronto building owners know the merits of wiping graffiti away as soon as it appears.

That's one kind of historical record that's not worth preserving.

What do higher interest rates mean for you?

InBusiness

Does Canada really need higher interest rates to keep inflation in check? Who knows, but we're going to get them anyway.

Along about June, the Bank of Canada will start raising the target for the "overnight rate." That's the rate financial institutions use to lend money to each other. This will send ripples across the interest rate spectrum, from business and consumer loans to mortgage rates and credit card charges. If the Bank of Canada keeps boosting rates, the ripple will start to look more like a wave.

In late March, the big banks anticipated coming rate hikes by boosting posted rates for five-year mortgages. The economic signs suggest they're on the right track. Core inflation crept up more than expected in February, and the subsequent release of GDP numbers for January suggests the economy is recovering faster than anyone thought.

How will this play out for you? Taken with related economic factors like the value of the Canadian dollar, higher interest rates will hurt more than they help. If you've been planning to buy a house, do it now because mortgage rates will be higher in the second half. Say you could get a $250,000 fixed rate mortgage today at 4.5 per cent, but would have to pay five per cent in August. Over a five-year term, that extra half-point will cost you $6,000 in additional interest. And you'll pay off nearly $1,800 less in principal.

You might also want to buy a new car sooner as well. Automakers have been offering zero per cent financing and attractive lease and maintenance deals. But car companies are still struggling to recover and they know this kind of competition strangles profits. Higher interest rates will boost their operating costs and make them cut back on incentives as soon as they can.

By boosting the value of the Canadian dollar, higher interest rates should make import prices cheaper. But at the retail level, Canadian prices are invariably higher than U.S. levels to start with — nearly seven per cent higher as of late — reflecting our cost structure.

If you really want bargains, cross the U.S. border and buy there.

Just remember one thing. If you do make more consumer purchases, don't run credit card balances. As interest rates rise, credit card rates will follow fast.

Obamas pay almost $2M in taxes

The White House says U.S. President Barack Obama and his wife Michelle made $5.5 million last year and paid nearly $1.8 million in federal income tax. The Obamas gave $329,000 to charities. That included $50,000 each to CARE and the United Negro College Fund. The president also donated his $1.4-million Nobel Peace Prize award to 10 charities. The White House said the vast majority of the Obamas' income was from sales of the president's books. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Protesters demand apology

TURKEY A handful of activists interrupted a meeting on gender equality Thursday, demanding that a Turkish official apologize for saying recently that homosexuality is a disease.

The minister, Aliye Kavaf, was giving a speech when the demonstrators began shouting slogans, asking her to apologize for last month's remark. Kavaf ignored the protesters and went on with her speech as cameras turned toward the demonstrators who held banners reading: "Don't hate, apologize." Moments later, men in dark suits covered the mouths of the protesters and dragged them out of the hall.

"I believe homosexuality is a biological disorder," Kavaf had said in March. "I think it is a disease that needs treatment."

Volcanic ash virtually shuts down half of Europe's air space

An enormous ash cloud from a remote Icelandic volcano caused the biggest flight disruption since the 2001 U.S. terrorist attacks Thursday as it drifted over northern Europe and stranded travellers on six continents.

Officials said it could take days for the skies to become safe again in one of aviation's most congested areas. The cloud, floating kilometres above Earth and capable of knocking out jet engines, wrecked travel plans for tens of thousands of people, from tourists and business travellers to politicians and royals. They couldn't see the source of their frustration — except indirectly, when the ash created vivid red and lavender sunsets.

A passenger waits at a deserted Belfast International Airport Thursday in Northern Ireland. All flights from the airport were cancelled after air traffic across Britain was disrupted because of ash from a volcanic eruption in Iceland.

Non-emergency flights in Britain were cancelled, and most will stay grounded until at least midday Friday. Authorities in Ireland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Belgium also closed their air space. France shut down 24 airports, including the main hub of Charles de Gaulle in Paris; Germany's Berlin and Hamburg were shut Thursday evening.

Kyla Evans, spokeswoman for air traffic service Eurocontrol, said half of all trans-Atlantic flights were expected to be cancelled Friday.

At London's Heathrow airport, normally one of the world's busiest with more than 1,200 flights and 180,000 travellers a day, passengers stared forlornly at departure boards on which every flight was listed as cancelled. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greek police say rocket attack came from domestic group

News in brief

IRAQ The Sunni-backed secular coalition that came in first in Iraqi elections tried Thursday to improve relations with powerful Shiite neighbour Iran, assuring Tehran that if it heads the new government, it would not let Iraq be used as a launching pad for an invasion. The Iraqiya alliance led by former prime minister Ayad Allawi edged out his chief rival in the March 7 parliamentary election by just two seats. But neither Iraqiya nor the State of Law alliance led by Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki won enough to form a government alone.

AFRICA Sudan's ruling party said soldiers from the semi-autonomous south have killed at least five of its supporters in the first report of deadly violence during historic elections that came to an end Thursday. Sudan's first multiparty presidential, parliamentary and local elections in 24 years, which began Sunday, were marred by allegations of fraud and boycotts and raised concerns of new unrest. The elections were a key requirement of a 2005 peace deal that ended a 21-year civil war between the predominantly Arab and Muslim north and rebels in the Christian-animist south. 'There's nothing to eat'

Survivors lacking supplies as China quake toll rises

Earthquake survivors shivered through a second night outdoors in a remote Tibetan corner of western China with rescuers fighting altitude sickness and dealing with a lack of supplies as the death toll rose to 760.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A survivor waves Thursday as he is rescued from rubble of a collapsed building after an earthquake in western China's Qinghai province.

People with broken arms or legs cried in pain as medical teams could offer little more than injections. A doctor at the Qinghai provincial hospital, where the severely injured were being flown, said she had no idea how many were being treated because there was no time to count them all.

Stunned survivors wandered the dusty streets of Jiegu, where relief workers estimated 70 to 90 per cent of the low-slung town of wood-and-mud housing had collapsed.

Hundreds gathered to sleep in a plaza around a 15-metre tall statue of the mythical Tibetan King Gesar, wrapped in blankets taken from homes shattered by Wednesday morning's quakes.

"There's nothing to eat. We've just been drinking water," said Zhaxi Zuoma, a 32-year-old camped with thousands of others on a rocky field. They asked a reporter to bring them food the next day.

The official Xinhua News Agency said 760 people had died, 243 people were missing, and 11,477 were injured, 1,174 severely. The worst of the quakes measured magnitude 6.9 by the U.S. Geological Survey and 7.1 by China's earthquake administration.

Rescue vehicles snaked along the 12-hour drive from the provincial capital into the mountainous region, which still trembled with aftershocks. The altitude averages about 4,000 metres, leaving some rescuers breathless and ill. Even the sniffer dogs were affected, Miao Chonggang, deputy director for emergency response under the China Earthquake Administration, told reporters in Beijing. Premier Wen Jiabao arrived in Yushu county Thursday evening to meet survivors.

Cuban government fraught with corruption: Historian

CUBA Corruption at the highest levels of government — not the meddling of a small band of dissidents — is the greatest threat to Cuba's communist system, a leading academic said in a highly unusual opinion posted Thursday on a state website.

The article by Esteban Morales — a historian who has written extensively on race and relations with the United States — crossed a number of red lines in tightly controlled Cuba, including openly discussing corruption rumours surrounding the dismissal of a top government aviation official who had fought alongside Ernesto (Che) Guevara and the Castros in the 1950s.

Morales said some top Cuban officials are preparing to divide the spoils if Cuba's political system disintegrates, like the shadowy oligarchs that emerged from the collapse of the Soviet Union in the 1990s.

"In reality, corruption is much more dangerous than so-called internal dissent," Morales wrote in the piece, which appeared on the website of the state National Artists and Writers Union of Cuba.

"The latter is isolated ... but corruption is truly counter-revolutionary because it comes from within the government and the state apparatus, which are the ones that really control the country's resources."

Members of the artists union have been surprisingly critical of the government in the past, but often with little effect. Criticism can also appear in government newspapers, but rarely on such hot-button issues as corruption among senior officials.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Power grab

- Esteban Morales never singled out Fidel or Raul Castro for blame, but he said cronyism is rampant in the system that has developed 51 years after their revolution won power and said some officials are waiting for a chance to grab the country's resources.

Old Habits Die Hard

Consumers Remain Complacent About Rising Car Insurance Rates

What Does Your Renewal Notice Say?

If you're like many consumers, your renewal notice is coming up again, a day you always dread. How much will your rate increase this year? With rates increasing by an average of almost 10% over the last 12 months across Ontario insurers, chances are your rate is going up again, even if your driving record has not changed. You might figure there is no point shopping around for a better rate since everyone's rates seem to be increasing. Better to at least save your time by signing back the renewal, just like you do every year, right? Wrong. You can save time and money on your car insurance...if you know where to look.

How Do I Break The Cycle?

First, you need to realize that you have control over your car insurance costs – you just need to exercise it. And the simplest way to do that is to shop around. Why? Because despite what you've heard about rising car insurance rates, the size of the increase can vary significantly from one company to the next and from one driver to another. The truth is that rates charged by different insurance companies to insure the same driver, with the same car, for the same coverage, can vary by hundreds and even thousands of dollars. Take a look at the table below.

Have you tried shopping for a better rate in the past and found yourself spending hours on the phone, calling around to various insurance companies to get quotes, only to find you still can't get a better deal? Do not despair, InsuranceHotline.com can help by instantly providing quotes from over 30 insurance companies to find you the lowest rate available. Best of all, the service is absolutely FREE.

Don't Be Fooled By Others Offering To "Compare Quotes"

Unlike most of its competitors, InsuranceHotline.com does not sell insurance, is not a licensed broker or agent, and is not owned in whole or in part by an insurance company. This allows InsuranceHotline.com to be completely unbiased when providing insurance quotes and keeps its focus solely on finding the lowest insurance rates for consumers.

By contrast, most websites offering to "compare insurance quotes" are owned by or affiliated with insurance brokers or agents and are therefore only capable of quoting rates from the limited number of insurance companies they represent, typically no more than 4 or 5.

Start Saving Your Money Now

There is no better time to break the habit. Before you sign back your renewal, take 10 minutes and let InsuranceHotline.com help you shop around for a lower rate. With quotes from over 30 top insurance companies, InsuranceHotline.com is the simplest and easiest way to make sure you aren't overpaying for your car insurance. So don't wait another minute. Go online to InsuranceHotline.com and start saving your money now.

We must repent: Pope

Pope Benedict XVI broke his silence on the clerical abuse scandal Thursday, noting the need for "we Christians" to repent for sins and recognize mistakes.

Benedict made the comments during an off-the-cuff homily at a mass inside the Vatican for members of the Pontifical Biblical Commission.

"We realize it's necessary to repent, in other words, recognize what is wrong in our lives," Benedict said.

He added: "Open ourselves to forgiveness ... and let ourselves be transformed."

"Let ourselves be transformed."
Pope Benedict XVI

Victims of clerical abuse have long demanded that Benedict take more personal responsibility for clerical abuse.

They claim the Vatican orchestrated a culture of coverup and secrecy that allowed priests to molest children for decades.

The Vatican confirmed that Benedict was indeed referring to the scandal.

President flees

Kyrgyzstan leader flies to Kazakhstan

The deposed president of Kyrgyzstan left the country for neighbouring Kazakhstan, allaying fears of a civil war in the Central Asian nation, which hosts a key U.S. military base supporting the war in Afghanistan.

The presidents of the United States, Russia and Kazakhstan helped arrange for Kyrgyz President Kurmanbek Bakiyev to leave the country Thursday, Kazakhstan said in its role as the rotating chair of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe. It called Bakiyev's move "an important step toward ... the prevention of a civil war in Kyrgyzstan."

Kurmanbek Bakiyev

Kyrgyzstan's provisional leader, Roza Otunbayeva, later showed The Associated Press what she said was a formal letter of resignation handwritten by Bakiyev and received by fax.

"Aware of my responsibility for the future of the people and the preservation of the integrity of the state .... I herewith submit my resignation," the letter said.

Otunbayeva said Bakiyev's departure would prevent clashes between various groups and even regions.

"We managed to avoid new bloodshed," she said. "People in all parts of the country are united in their condemnation of the bloody regime," said Otunbayeva, who looked visibly tired.

Red Shirts hunker down at new camp in Bangkok

PROTEST Thai troops cleared the gutted remains of armoured carriers Thursday after anti-government protesters vacated the site of last week's bloody clashes and shifted to an upscale shopping district to intensify their campaign to oust the prime minister.

The Red Shirt protesters vow their new encampment in the Rajprasong shopping area, several kilometres from the old camp in Phan Fa, will be the final battlefront in their bid to have parliament dissolved and new elections held.

A failed attempt by security forces to flush the Red Shirts from Phan Fa Saturday ended with deadly street battles that left 24 people dead in Thailand's worst political violence in nearly two decades. The government's disaster management centre said a 24th person died of injuries Thursday.

The crisis has deeply divided this Southeast Asian nation into colour-coded factions, threatening to sink an economy that had recently started to revive.

Tensions were likely to build up after the four-day lunar New Year festival of Songkran ends Friday.

CALIFORNIA An ailing Northern California man delivered his own obituary to a newspaper then hanged himself from a nearby bridge. El Dorado County sheriff's Lt. Bryan Golmitz said the body of 64-year-old Allan Leo Peters II was found Wednesday hanging by a yellow rope from an old bridge, according to The Sacramento Bee newspaper. The Mountain Democrat newspaper published part of his suicide note with his obituary. The man wrote that he had been struggling with emphysema and had trouble breathing. He wrote, "Yes, I have hanged myself (At least I hope I did)." The suicide note included a $90 money order, the cost of publishing an obituary, the papers said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Just do your taxes, it's worth it

Many Canadians will be spending the next few weeks wading through paperwork and scouring their homes for months-old receipts as the April 30 deadline to get their taxes in order looms.

"People hate doing this," said Dennis Tew, chief financial officer at Franklin Templeton Investments Corp.

"They know that they have to go and find all their information. They know that they have to pull it together."

Tew said he's made a habit of getting his own tax return done early each year — mainly because his tax refund arrives that much quicker.

While Gena Katz, executive director of Ernst & Young's tax practice, agrees it's "silly" to put off filing a tax return if the government owes you money. She said it's even worse to miss the deadline when it's the other way around.

"For people who owe money, they really have to file on time or at least pay on time because the penalties are pretty severe for late filing," said Katz.

With two weeks to go until the taxman comes knocking, chronic procrastinators across Canada may be at a loss on where to start.

"All of a sudden you go into this panic because now you're trying to find all of this information," said Cleo Hamel, a senior tax analyst with H&R Block.

The government needs any information relating to income, so first and foremost it's important to round up those T-slips.

The next priority is to track down forms and receipts related to any number of available tax credits — charitable donations, children's health programs, child care, home renovations, tuition, and health-care costs.

"If the only thing you have is your income information, I know that by the end of it you're not going to be happy with the result. You'll probably owe money or maybe you're not getting as much of a refund," said Hamel.

Late-filing penalties

- If you fail to pay your 2009 taxes by midnight April 30, the Canada Revenue Agency will charge a five per cent penalty on the balance owing, plus one per cent of the balance for each full month the return is late for up to 12 months.

Hal Kvisle has led TransCanada Corp. since 2001.

TransCanada CEO to retire

ENERGY Diversified energy giant TransCanada Corp. will soon be under new leadership.

North America's largest natural gas shipper says its chief executive — one of Western Canada's best-known and most successful business leaders — will retire at the end of June.

Hal Kvisle, 57, joined TransCanada in 1999 after years in the oil industry, including a period at legendary Dome Petroleum Ltd., and moved into the top job at the gas pipeline operator in 2001.

During his tenure, he won wide respect in the energy sector and was named Canada's Outstanding CEO of the year in 2008.

Kvisle said Thursday that TransCanada has either achieved or exceeded all goals it set out in the past decade.

In particular, he cited the company's Canadian expansion and the establishment of a gas transmission business in the United States.

Kvisle will be succeeded by current chief operating officer Russ Girling, a former CFO at the Calgary company.

Barry Jackson, TransCanada's chairman, cited Kvisle's "focus, drive and wisdom" for helping the natural gas shipper grow rapidly in the last decade.

Solar company's stock soars on positive report

SOLAR Arise Technologies Corp. was the most active TSX-listed stock Thursday morning, with its value gaining more than 80 per cent after the Waterloo, Ont.-based solar company issued an upbeat report on its order book.

The shares were up 14 cents or nearly 85 per cent, with more than eight million traded on the Toronto Stock Exchange before midday. At about 30 cents, however, the stock remained worth less than half its 52-week high.

Earlier, Arise issued a preliminary financial report that indicated the company nearly doubled its shipments of photvoltaic cells in the first three months of this year, compared with the last three months of 2009.

Arise estimated it shipped 13.9 megawatts of photovoltaic cells in the first quarter of 2010, up 99 per cent from 7.0 MW in the prior quarter and a six-fold jump from the year-earlier quarter.

Arise also said Thursday it expects to report $15.8 million in revenue in the period, up nearly 40 per cent from $7.2 million from 2009, when the quarter's number crunching is completed.

Final figures for the first quarter and to be released in May and Arise cautioned that the figures are based on unaudited preliminary data.

EI premiums will rise dramatically

INSURANCE Canada's budget watchdog says employment insurance premiums are going up, and by a lot.

The parliamentary budget office estimates that EI premiums paid by workers and employers will need to rise by the maximum allowable limit of 15 cents per $100 of insurable earnings to return the fund to near balance in five years.

That would hike annual contributions per worker by $535 — with about $223 more being paid by the employee and $312 by the employer.

The maximum EI contribution paid by employees now is just over $730 per year.

The combination of the increased premiums, more workers and higher wages means that Ottawa's EI revenues will grow from $16.2 billion last year to $27.1 billion by 2014.

But the budget office estimates the fund will still carry a $700-million deficit by 2014 after hitting a peak shortfall of $10.7 billion in 2011.

Currently, the government has frozen contribution premiums until 2011 as part of the two-year stimulus package dealing with the recession.

Brampton recycler to buy Royal Laser steel company

METALS Royal Laser Corp. says it has received a friendly takeover offer from privately owned Triple M Metal LP, a Brampton metal recycling company that proposes to acquire the steelmaker for $43.5 million in cash.

Toronto-based Royal Laser, which makes flat-rolled steel for the automotive market, said Thursday it supports Triple M's offer to acquire all of its outstanding common shares for approximately 46 cents per share.

Shares in Royal Laser added 7.5 cents or more than 20 per cent to 44.5 cents in trading of nearly 1.7 million shares by early afternoon.

One of Royal Laser's biggest shareholders, Jaguar Financial Corp., announced separately it plans to tender its 18.2 million shares to the Triple M offer.

Young adults care as much about privacy as older Americans, according to a new study.

Youth do care about privacy, study finds

All the dirty laundry younger people seem to air on social networks these days might lead older Americans to conclude that today's tech-savvy generation doesn't care about privacy.

Such an assumption fits happily with declarations that privacy is dead, as online marketers and social sites such as Facebook try to persuade people to share even more about who they are, what they are thinking and where they are at any given time.

But it's not quite true, a new study finds. Despite mounds of anecdotes about college students sharing booze-chugging party photos, posting raunchy messages and badmouthing potential employers online, young adults generally care as much about privacy as older Americans.

The report, from researchers at the University of California, Berkeley and the University of Pennsylvania, is among the first quantitative studies looking at young people's attitudes toward privacy as government officials and corporate executives alike increasingly grapple with such issues.

"It is going to counter a lot of assumptions that have been made about young adults and their attitudes toward privacy," said Mary Madden, senior researcher at the Pew Internet.

- According to the study, 40 per cent of adults ages 18 to 24 believe executives should face jail time if their company uses someone's personal information illegally — the same as the response among those 35 to 44 years old.

No decision yet: Bosh

'Nobody knows, not even me,' star says of future plans

Standing at the podium in the media room across from the Toronto Raptors clubhouse, perhaps for the final time, Chris Bosh fielded questions about his future for nearly half an hour with the cruel, emotionless calculations of an auditor, or an accountant.

The five-time all-star forward knows full well that his looming free agency is about to open up a host of new doors and opportunities, and he sounded like a man intent on exploring them.

General managers from around the NBA will soon tempt him with promises of big money and championship runs, the thing he says he wants most. Some teams will want to make him the centrepiece of a new push forward, while others will try to sell him on uniting with another all-star to form a powerhouse.

As all that unfolds, Raptors general manager Bryan Colangelo will be working feverishly on ways to augment his roster enough to earn Bosh's approval and signature on a new contract.

One way or another, big, big money is coming his way, so that won't be the deciding factor. Rather, his future will be decided more on whose vision he buys into most.

"That's the question that has to be answered this summer," Bosh replied when asked if he still has faith in Colangelo's ability to build a winner. "I think that's a big part of it. If I still believe in him, then yeah. But every GM is going to try to sell their business. I'm in a position where everybody is going to try to sell me their business."

That's the cold assessment of someone poised to be the next franchise player to leave the Raptors. Scars still remain from the painful departures of former stars Tracy McGrady and Vince Carter and colour the fanbase's outlook on Bosh's future, if not management's, too.

Already in some circles people are convinced Bosh is as good as gone, tired of a team that has made the playoffs in just two of his seven seasons. There are whispers his effort waned after ankle injury in order to preserve his market value.

The 26-year-old insisted that's not the case, and his decision will be coloured by nothing other than what he feels is best for him. Right now, he has no idea what that is.

"Nobody knows, not even me," Bosh said in his first expansive comments on his future.

"So that's something that only the future holds. You know, everybody keeps looking for answers. There are no answers right now.

"There will only be answers when it's time."

Storybook ending?

- Chris Bosh enters the off-season as the franchise leader in points (9,275) and rebounds (4,450), and talked about how great it would be to win a championship with the Raptors, saying, "That's always the perfect storybook ending ... it would be a great movie."

Leafs give Monster two-year extension

NHL The Monster is returning to the Maple Leafs crease for another two years.

Toronto signed goaltender Jonas Gustavsson to a $2.7-million US, two-year contract extension yesterday.

Jonas Gustavsson

The six-foot-three Swede, whose nickname is The Monster because of his size, was eligible to become a restricted free agent this summer.

Gustavsson, 25, had a tumultuous rookie season, undergoing two heart surgeries and missing time with a groin injury before recording a seven-game win streak in March.

He was one of six Leafs players who received a special mention from GM Brian Burke at his year-end media conference Wednesday.

"After a tough start, he put together some real good hockey for us late," Burke said.

Gustavsson finished with a record of 16-15-9 and a .902 save percentage and 2.87 goals-against average. He is also Toronto's nominee for the Masterton Trophy for perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

Gustavsson is expected to join Sweden at next month's IIHF World Hockey Championship in Germany. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NFL The Oakland Raiders signed free-agent quarterback Kyle Boller Thursday, adding a former first-rounder to an unsettled quarterback mix. Former No. 1 overall pick JaMarcus Russell lost his job midway through last season because of ineffectiveness and is competing with Bruce Gradkowski to get it back. Charlie Frye started three games last season and is also back.

NFL Cleveland Browns general manager Tom Heckert said the team has had talks with the St. Louis Rams about moving up in the NFL draft to take quarterback Sam Bradford with the No. 1 overall pick. Heckert said Thursday that the Browns, who have the No. 7 pick, have been "'playing a little phone tag" but said they have talked with the Rams, who are expected to select the Oklahoma quarterback.

NBA The Clippers wasted no time making their first off-season change, firing interim head coach Kim Hughes on Thursday in the team's third major shake-up in 2½ months.

Stamkos, Perry, Tavares agree to play at world championship

HOCKEY Team Canada is taking shape heading into next month's IIHF World Hockey Championship.

A source said yesterday that general manager Mark Messier has received confirmation from 16 players whose teams didn't qualify for the NHL playoffs, including Rocket Richard co-winner Steven Stamkos of the Tampa Bay Lightning and Canadian Olympian Corey Perry of the Anaheim Ducks.

As expected, Hockey Canada will be sending a young group to Germany for the tournament.

Perry is the lone representative from the Olympic team that won gold in Vancouver. He'll be joined by eight others who are 25 or younger — Stamkos, John Tavares of the New York Islanders, Evander Kane of the Atlanta Thrashers, James Neal of the Dallas Stars, Steve Downie of the Lightning, Kris Russell of the Columbus Blue Jackets, Marc Staal of the New York Rangers and Brent Burns of the Minnesota Wild.

The veterans include 37-year-old forward Ray Whitney of the Carolina Hurricanes and 33-year-old Chris Mason of the St. Louis Blues, the lone goaltender to be named so far.

The other players who have committed are Steve Ott of the Stars, Rich Peverley of the Thrashers, Rene Bourque and Mark Giordano of the Calgary Flames and Francois Beauchemin, the Toronto Maple Leafs defenceman who will be representing Canada for the first time.

Messier has also invited Edmonton Oilers prospect Jordan Eberle to serve as an alternate. He could end up being added to the team's roster, just as Jonathan Toews was in 2007 and Sam Gagner in 2008.

Cleveland's LeBron James (23) attempts a shot against Orlando's Dwight Howard at Amway Arena during a game in Orlando, Fla., in February. Both clubs are considered powerhouses in the East.

Threats abound in NBA playoffs

Maybe Kobe Bryant is too beaten up to last through three playoff rounds against the rest of the West.

Perhaps the aging Boston Celtics do have one more run in them, or the Atlanta Hawks are ready to take the next step.

Sure, it's easy to think this year's NBA champion will be LeBron James and Cleveland, Bryant and the Los Angeles Lakers, or the Orlando Magic.

Just don't tell that to all the other teams believing the trio can be knocked off.

> "I don't think anybody is afraid of anybody."
> Mark Cuban, Dallas Mavericks owner

"I don't think anybody is afraid of anybody," Dallas owner Mark Cuban said. "We think we can beat anybody and anybody thinks they can beat us. That's how good the teams are."

The best during the regular season were the Cavaliers, but they were last season, too. All that got them was a trip to Orlando, where the Magic ended their season in the conference finals, and James picked up a $25,000 US fine for not talking to the media after the loss.

But with a bolstered front line that now features Shaquille O'Neal and Antawn Jamison alongside James, there may not be anything that can stop the Cavaliers this time.

Saturday, the Cavaliers open against the Chicago Bulls, who earned the NBA's final playoff spot on the last night of the regular season. Also Saturday, Milwaukee visits Atlanta; Boston hosts Miami and Utah visits Denver.

Sunday, it's playoff newcomer Oklahoma City at the Lakers; Orlando hosting Charlotte, another first-time post-season team; San Antonio visiting Dallas; and Phoenix entertaining Portland.

The Suns, who missed the playoffs last year but rode a late-season surge to the No. 3 seed in the West this year, are another team that could spoil one of the presumed finals matchups.

"I don't know if you start matching us up with all the teams in the league how talented we are, but I think as a collective group we're pretty doggone good," Suns coach Alvin Gentry said.

All eight playoff teams in the West won 50 games, the second time that happened in three years. Still, the Lakers probably stand out as the class of the conference — when their health allows it.

Steelers ready to punish Big Ben

NFL Steelers president Art Rooney II says the team is ready to discipline Ben Roethlisberger but the punishment will be co-ordinated with the NFL and won't pre-empt any league action.

Rooney said Thursday that Roethlisberger told him he is prepared to accept disciplinary action. The Steelers likely would have acted by now, but Rooney said the NFL's labour agreement makes that difficult.

Ben Roethlisberger

Rooney expects NFL commissioner Roger Goodell to spend several weeks reviewing the accusations that Roethlisberger sexually assaulted a 20-year-old college student in a Georgia nightclub bathroom. The quarterback won't be charged in the case. The NFL and the Steelers probably won't settle on any punishment until after next week's three-day draft.

"When we get to the point where we have agreed with the commissioner on what that action will be, that's when it will be imposed," Rooney said during his first news conference concerning the Roethlisberger case.

The Roethlisberger case has been unsettling to the Steelers, and Rooney did not hide his displeasure.

"I have made it clear to Ben that his conduct in this incident did not live up to our standards," Rooney said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The love is gone for Kings' Doughty in Vancouver

HOCKEY Drew Doughty has gone from Olympic hero to public enemy No. 1 in Vancouver.

The Los Angeles Kings defenceman found himself in the rare position Thursday of preparing for his first career NHL playoff game against the Canucks on the same ice where he helped Canada claim gold in February.

But he's not worried about the lost fan loyalty.

"I always like having people root against you," Doughty said prior to the game Thursday. "A lot of people have us as the underdog in this series, coming in sixth place there."

The second-year rearguard has a chance to accomplish what few others can — win Olympic gold and a Stanley Cup in his first post-season.

"It's crossed my mind before, but I know how hard it's going to be for us to win that Stanley Cup," said Doughty.

Kings coach Terry Murray has high hopes for the 20-year-old Doughty.

"I expect Drew Doughty to play in the Stanley Cup playoffs the way he played for Canada in the Olympics," said Murray. "He knows how to get himself up for the big games. He knows how to step up at the right time."

Commonwealth Games carry pioneering spirit

The Queen's Baton passed through Canada this week on its way to the 19th Commonwealth Games in Delhi, India.

Few took notice of the relay that will take the baton to 72 countries on five continents before reaching Nehru Stadium and the opening ceremony Oct. 3.

> "The Games have come to include developing parts of the world hungry to express themselves through the pursuit of sport."

That's a shame when you consider the significance of one of the oldest multi-sport gatherings on the face of the earth and what it says about the power of athletics to create understanding between cultures.

The Commonwealth Games began in 1930 in Hamilton as the British Empire Games. Over the years they have showcased magnificent sporting achievement.

Roger Bannister of England and John Landy of Australia both ran the "Miracle Mile" in less than four minutes in Vancouver in 1954.

The legendary "Kip" Keino and the Kenyan distance runners initially made their mark in Kingston, Jamaica in 1966. The Games first ventured to Asia in 1998 at Kuala Lumpur. There, a 13-year-old diver from Canada, Alexandre Despatie, became the youngest major games champion. In Manchester in 2002, Ian Thorpe of Australia, one of the greatest swimmers of all time, won six gold medals.

More important than the exploits of the sporting stars is the pioneering spirit of the Commonwealth Games. A far cry from the very "British" field day they once were, the Games have come to include developing parts of the world hungry to express themselves through the pursuit of sport.

India's population of 1.17 billion is second largest in the world next to the Peoples Republic of China. Yet, the upcoming Commonwealth Games represent the largest sporting event ever staged in India's history.

There are, of course, issues.

Overcrowding, pollution, poverty and lack of infrastructure are hurdles to overcome. But the same can be said of most countries vis-à-vis sporting spectacles. The important thing being the Commonwealth Games and India are willing to try.

Sport aspires to be unlike politics, religion and economics. It attempts to break down barriers instead of creating them.

Therefore, more power to the Commonwealth Games.

In a year where FIFA is courageous enough to take the World Cup to Africa for the first time, we should all take notice of the path of the Queen's Baton.

Its' journey signals the power of sport is reaching more people around the globe than ever before.

Tiger to play at Quail Hollow

GOLF Out of golf for five months until the Masters, Tiger Woods is waiting only two weeks to tee it up again.

Woods announced Thursday he will play the Quail Hollow Championship, which begins April 29.

It will be his first time playing at a tournament where tickets are sold to the general public since his spectacular downfall from a sex scandal.

Woods tied for fourth last week at the Masters, which has the most controlled gallery in golf. Weekly badges are secured months in advance, and fans fear losing them if caught showing poor etiquette.

Woods received warm applause when he teed off in the first round, and the support was steady throughout the week.

The early commitment was a sign that Woods plans to be helpful to the promotion of tournaments.

FIFA says demand is high for World Cup tickets

FIFA said 53,000 World Cup tickets were sold in the first eight hours of the final phase Thursday, and blamed high demand for the technical problems that caused delays and led to fan frustration. FIFA said 23 of the 64 games were sold out after tickets went on sale at ticket centres and banks across South Africa. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Record night for Eveland

Building on first start, pitcher puts together 11⅓ scoreless innings

MLB RESULTS

VS

Two weeks to the day after he learned he had made the team, after a nervous walk to meet with the general manager on the final day of spring training, Toronto Blue Jays pitcher Dana Eveland took to the mound and claimed a piece of franchise history.

The 26-year-old left-hander threw four scoreless innings to open his second start with the Blue Jays, setting a team record while helping the team to a 7-3 win over the Chicago White Sox Thursday night. Eveland did not allow a run in his debut last week, and his run of 11⅓ scoreless innings is the longest any starter has gone at the beginning of their career in Toronto.

"He pitched well enough to make this team in spring training, so he doesn't surprise me," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said before the game.

Eveland allowed two runs over six innings, striking out four while walking three. Shortstop Alex Gonzalez provided the offensive spark, going 4-for-5 with three runs batted in.

DARREN CALABRESE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Blue Jays Dana Eveland pitches against the Chicago White Sox Thursday during the first inning in Toronto. Eveland set a team record with 11⅓ scoreless innings in a row.

The Blue Jays took to the field Thursday night having suffered twin attacks to their pride the previous day. Toronto was routed 11-1 by Chicago Wednesday, enduring the added indignity of losing in front of the smallest crowd the team had ever drawn to Rogers Centre, with only 10,610 fans in the stands.

Attendance was not much stronger Thursday — 10,744 — but there was no comparing the results on the field. Toronto chased Chicago starter Freddy Garcia to the showers after only three innings of work, beating him for eight hits and seven earned runs.

Travis Snider led the hit parade with his first home run of the season, blasting a solo shot over the fence in right field in the second inning. Toronto added three more runs in the third and turned up the heat even more in the fourth.

Utility man Mike McCoy scored Snider when he sent a shot to left field that bounced off Juan Pierre's glove at the fence. Gonzalez scored McCoy and Jose Bautista on a double to take a 7-0 lead.

Toronto's ability to generate runs had been raised as a concern before the game, as Gaston lamented the continued absence of second baseman Aaron Hill. The 28-year-old, who set career highs in home runs (36) and runs batted in (108) last season, is on the 15-day disabled list with a tender hamstring and is not eligible to return until next week.

"You're always going to miss a bat like that," Gaston said.

"He's getting real close to coming back. We'll just try to keep our head above water until we get him back and, hopefully, he comes back swinging the bat like he did last year."

Canadiens win in OT, steal home ice edge

(Montreal leads 1-0)

Canadiens 3 Capitals 2

VS

Tomas Plekanec scored on a slapshot at 13:19 of overtime as the Montreal Canadiens stole home ice advantage from the Washington Capitals with a 3-2 win Thursday night.

Mike Cammalleri and Scott Gomez scored in regulation for the Canadiens while Nicklas Backstrom and Joe Corvo replied for the Capitals.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference quarter-final is Saturday in Washington, where the regular season's top team will try to salvage a split at home before the series shifts to Montreal.

The Canadiens were overwhelmed at the start by the electricity of the sellout Verizon Center crowd of 18,277 and the relentless Capitals attack.

Capitals superstar Alexander Ovechkin was a non-factor, failing to register a single shot on goal for only the second time this season, and getting undressed on the Canadiens tying goal in the third period.

Canadiens goalie Jaroslav Halak shook off a shaky finish to the regular season and shined in only his second career playoff start. He made 39 saves on 41 shots through regulation and stopped all six shots he saw in overtime.

Halak improved to 8-0-1 this year when facing 40 shots or more.

In the Capitals net, former Canadien Jose Theodore wasn't nearly as busy but was sharp with 35 stops. Plekanec had created some controversy earlier in the week when he said the Capitals goalies weren't as good as Buffalo's Ryan Miller or New Jersey's Martin Brodeur. But he backed the trash talking up with his overtime winner on a laser from the high slot for his fifth career playoff goal in his 22nd game.

Bruins can't rattle Sabres' Miller

(Buffalo leads 1-0)

Bruins 1 Sabres 2

VS

Ryan Miller made 38 saves to lead the Buffalo Sabres to a playoff-opening 2-1 victory over the Boston Bruins Thursday night.

Captain Craig Rivet scored the go-ahead goal with slapshot from the right circle with six minutes left in the second period, and Thomas Vanek also scored in Buffalo's first playoff game in three years. Miller stoped 23 shots in the second period alone, in building on a stellar season in which he won a franchise-best 41 games and backstopped the United States to a silver medal at the Vancouver Games.

Mark Recchi scored for the Bruins, who finished the regular season on an 8-3-1 roll to finish sixth in the Eastern Conference.

Tyler Ennis of the Buffalo Sabres just misses the net against Tuukka Rask of the Boston Bruins Thursday in Buffalo.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference quarter-final is Saturday in Buffalo.

It was a game of shifting momentum, with the Sabres controlling the tempo and buzzing the net through most of the first period. Buffalo was rewarded by opening the scoring 4:52 in when Vanek snapped in Derek Roy's drop pass on a 2-on-1 rush.

The Bruins responded with a thoroughly dominating second period, in which they outshot Buffalo 20-6 through the first 14 minutes and 24-8 overall. The 24 shots allowed by the Sabres matched a franchise playoff record, dating to a 3-2 win at Chicago in April 1980.

Trouble for Boston was, it had difficulty beating Miller, and found itself trailing 2-1.

After Recchi, with his 51st career playoff goal, converted a rebound in front to tie it at the 9:30 mark, the Sabres regained the lead less than five minutes later, when Rivet blasted a shot over Tuukka Rask's shoulder. Rask never saw the shot as he was screened by Sabres grinder Patrick Kaleta.

Miller constantly foiled the Bruins with several big saves.

Patrice Bergeron was robbed after attempting to snap in a rebound from the slot. Miller also held his ground to foil Marco Sturm's hot shot from the left circle.

The Sabres regained their composure in the third period by allowing only six shots.

DeRosario leads the way

Toronto FC wins first of the year on the back of captain's brace

MLS RESULTS

TFC 2 Union 1

VS

Captain Dwayne De Rosario scored on an 81st-minute penalty to give Toronto FC a 2-1 win over the expansion Philadelphia Union in MLS play Thursday night.

Union goalkeeper Chris Seitz, who will rue both Toronto goals, took down an onrushing O'Brian White in the penalty box and De Rosario took advantage by putting away the spot kick for his second goal of the game.

De Rosario, who has all three of Toronto's goals this season, missed his hat trick in injury time when he hit the bar on a two-on-one with Chad Barrett.

Up until the penalty, it looked like Philadelphia was destined to collect its first ever away point, despite losing its captain to a red card in the first half.

Toronto (1-2-0) may be in the win column but there are more questions than answers early in the season. Philadelphia (1-2-0), meanwhile, showed character and some style in clawing its way back on enemy turf in front of 21,978 at BMO Field before giving up the penalty as Toronto pressed in the late stages.

After a slow start, the game heated up in the 34th minute when Philadelphia skipper Danny Califf was sent off for sticking out an arm to fell Toronto's Julian de Guzman, preventing him from racing past to latch onto a back pass.

Referee Baldomero Toledo showed the mohawk-wearing central defender a red card for violent conduct. The foul was glaring — with de Guzman's Afro flopping as he tumbled to the ground — and seemingly unnecessary.

Toronto scored on the ensuing free kick from outside the box as Seitz failed to hang onto De Rosario's shot. Seitz blocked the ball, only to see it trickle past him.

The goal, against the run of play, was a gift from the Philadelphia goalie.

TFC 'keeper Stefan Frei preserved the lead with a diving save in the 40th from a long curving ball bounced dangerously into the box. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Devils not going to panic: Brodeur

NHL Martin Brodeur has been around long enough to not be offended by the booing the New Jersey Devils fans gave the team in its Game 1 loss to the Philadelphia Flyers.

The fans expect a lot, and they got frustrated watching the Devils drop a 2-1 decision on Wednesday night.

For many, it was the start to another early post-season exit by the Atlantic Division champion Devils, who haven't got out of the first round in the last two seasons.

Brodeur understands it, and the winningest goaltender in NHL history is not worried.

As far as the Devils are concerned, they played better than the Flyers in Game 1, limiting them to 14 shots. They just didn't win the opener in the best-of-seven series that will resume Friday night at the Prudential Center.

"It's important to have that feeling and to say: 'Well that game is over,'" Brodeur said Thursday after practice.

"Yes, we're down 1-0 and there's not much we can do about it. Actually, there is nothing we can do about it. The only thing you can control is the next time you're on the ice and you have to get yourself ready."

The one thing the Devils need to improve is their power play. It was 0-for-5 against the Flyers and goaltender Brian Boucher and didn't generate a lot of chances.

So the Devils focused on moving the puck in the offensive zone in practice Thursday.

They did not do a job of that Wednesday when they always seemed to be under constant pressure from the Flyers.

When they did get shots, they were either blocked or missed the net. When the shots got through to Boucher, the goalie either made the save or his defencemen were there to clear the puck.

"You can't be depressed," Devils coach Jacques Lemaire said. "You get depressed, you won't go far."

Lemaire went out of his way to say that Washington is the best team in the Eastern Conference. Little separates the other seven playoff teams in the conference.

"Yes, we're down 1-0 and there's not much we can do about it."
Martin Brodeur

"What people always forget is you have to win four hockey games," Devils centre Patrik Elias said.

"Every game is different. We still have confidence and we feel we are a good enough team to beat them and that's how we have to approach it. We have to forget about the loss and do the job that is ahead."

Ilya Kovalchuk, who probably was the Devils' best player in the game, took a simple approach. He wants the Devils to shoot more, especially on the power play.

The Russian also knows the Devils can't lose the opening two games at home.

"We just have to bring our A-game, our double A-game," Kovalchuk said. "We have to bring a lot of energy and be focused.

Hossa drawing on experience to help Hawks

PLAYOFFS Marian Hossa knows how difficult it is to get to the Stanley Cup finals. He also knows how heartbreaking it can be once you're there.

Two years ago, playing with Pittsburgh, his team lost to Detroit. Last season, while with the Red Wings, he fell short against the Penguins. Two straight trips to the championship round, two straight losses.

Now he's in the post-season for the third season in a row with a third team after signing a 12-year, $62.8-million contract with the Chicago Blackhawks, who open Friday against the Nashville Predators.

"You're always hungry," Hossa said. "In one way it was disappointing. ... But I consider myself lucky because not too many players go to the final anyway. It was a great experience, a tough finish and I'm looking forward for a better finish this year."

Hossa, who needed shoulder surgery after joining the Blackhawks, finished with 24 goals and 27 assists in 57 games this season. After scoring 40 goals for the Red Wings last season, he played with the sore shoulder during the playoffs and managed just six goals in 23 post-season games — none in the finals.

"He's a guy who wants to win and play for good hockey teams. He's done that his whole career," Nashville centre David Legwand said. "That's something to say about him. He always wants to play for a winner. ... He played through pain in the playoffs last year."

Hossa and top scoring threats Patrick Kane (30 goals, 88 points) and Jonathan Toews (25 goals, 68 points) will have to deal with Nashville defencemen Shea Weber and Ryan Suter and try to solve six-foot-five goalie Pekka Rinne. Game 2 is Sunday at the United Center before the series shifts to Nashville.

Weber tied for second among NHL defencemen with 16 goals this season, including three game-winners, has been a force from the backline.

Mikael Silvestre of Arsenal challenges Jermain Defoe of Tottenham Hotspur Wednesday during the Barclays Premier League match at White Hart Lane in London, England.

Chelsea aims to win at White Hart Lane

After Tottenham all but ended Arsenal's title hopes, Premier League leader Chelsea is hoping Harry Redknapp's side can't make it two derby wins in four days Saturday (Setanta Canada, 12:45 p.m. ET).

Chelsea has a four-point lead over Manchester United and a further two-point advantage over Arsenal with four games to go.

But Chelsea hasn't won a league match at White Hart Lane since August 2005 and Tottenham is still in contention for the fourth Champions League spot after beating Arsenal 2-1 Wednesday.

"Sometimes you have a big series when you beat your opponent every time you play them and then one day it stops," Chelsea goalkeeper Petr Cech said. "I have been at Chelsea for six years and just kept my first clean sheet at home against Bolton (on Tuesday) so now it's time for our record at White Hart Lane to change, too.

"Last season everything went wrong. There was a bomb alert, the game was delayed, we were kept waiting and then we started slow and lost 1-0. Even though we had chances, it was not our day. This time it's going to be different for us."

"Last season (at the Lane) everything went wrong. ... Even though we had chances, it was not our day. This time it's going to be different for us."
Petr Cech, Chelsea goalkeeper

Chelsea would be even closer to a first championship crown since 2006 if United also loses at Manchester City in Saturday's early kickoff (Setanta Canada, 7:45 a.m. ET).

Morale is low at United after failing to win its last two league matches and being ousted from the Champions League.

"We've just got to keep going," United midfielder Ryan Giggs said. "It's been a bad 10 days or so for us — results haven't gone our way and neither has the luck, and you need both of those things to go in your favour at this time of the season.

"We've just got to bounce back from the disappointment of the last couple of weeks and we're definitely not going to give up. We're going to keep fighting until the end."

Spurs will be hoping for the opposite outcome at Eastlands as they are just a point behind fourth-place City.

"I said to the players if we could beat Arsenal we could still get fourth place," Redknapp said. "It's still going to be hard but we're right in there and this will give us a big lift now for Chelsea on Saturday.

Game 2 not exactly a must-win for Penguins, but it's pretty close

NHL One game into their Stanley Cup defence, the Pittsburgh Penguins already have been reminded that consistency and determination can be as important as star power in winning a playoff round.

The Ottawa Senators lack players with the offensive skills and post-season portfolios of Sidney Crosby, Evgeni Malkin and Jordan Staal. They do possess a sound game plan, excellent defencemen and a commitment to make an Eastern Conference first-round series that was supposed to be a Penguins walkover into an extended, difficult-to-win round.

Deep down, the Penguins probably expected their true challenges to come in later rounds against Washington and/or New Jersey, teams they didn't defeat once this season. The Senators' surprise 5-4 victory in Game 1 changed all that.

Game 2 Friday isn't necessarily a must-win game for the Penguins, who came back from 2-0 deficits twice while winning the Stanley Cup last spring. But it's as close as it gets.

"We didn't come in here expecting to win four straight," Crosby said Thursday. "It's going to be a tough series. If anything, (the) last game should motivate us even more. We hadn't played Ottawa for a long time. We have a history with them in the playoffs, and I don't think that the element of not liking them was really there enough. That's definitely there now."

Maybe, too, a heightened sense of awareness that nothing is guaranteed in the playoffs. Even to defending champions.

"The desperation level and the urgency level, they were better in that department," coach Dan Bylsma said. "They were very good in that regard. We have to get to that right now. If them beating us in our building in Game 1, that hatred and that desperation had better be enough to bring to Game 2, and we'd better be ready to get to our game. We should have it right now with how they played, and how they played against us."

The Penguins know they need more shots from Crosby, who got off only two in Game 1. They need better goaltending from Marc-Andre Fleury, who allowed several questionable goals. They need Malkin to play with the drive and purpose he showed while scoring twice, giving him seven goals in his last five games against Ottawa.

They need more across the board from players who perhaps learned again that the kind of inconsistency that can be written off during a long season can cause considerable grief during a playoff series.

"They played better than we did and they won," defenceman Brooks Orpik said.

"We move on."

for Metro Canada

Matthew Vaughn's superhero flick Kick-Ass is an outrageous mix of stylized violence and dark humour that both gently mocks and pays homage to decades of superhero lore.

It's a lovingly R-rated affair that is sure to thrill action movie lovers and costumed hero fans alike. Some will undoubtedly be offended by scenes featuring a pre-teen girl viciously dispatching legions of henchmen, but anyone with a sense of humour and an understanding that movies are make believe should be too busy giggling to notice any such party poopery.

The film follows a boring and anonymous teen who decides to become a crime-fighter known as Kick-Ass. Predictably, he's not very good at it. But a grainy cell phone video makes him an internet sensation, drawing the attention of a local crime boss who wants to take down the costumed vigilante harming his family business.

Of course, that's not Kick-Ass but a scorned cop out for revenge who is played by Nicolas Cage (channeling Adam West) and has turned his 11-year-old daughter into a deadly assassin.

They're called Big Daddy and Hit Girl and (much like Kick-Ass and the rich boy hero Red Mist) they aren't actually superheroes, but damaged people just crazy enough to think it could work.

The story is relentlessly entertaining with just enough genre subversion and subtle commentary on new media celebrities to offer a brain behind the colorful explosions.

Films this odd and true to their own warped vision don't come along often and should be celebrated. It's a wish-fulfillment loveletter to fanboy culture that lands enough successful jokes and punches to appeal to a wider crowd as well.

Kick-Ass was clearly designed to be a cult movie, which rarely works as cult films are supposed to be dismissed oddities rediscovered years after theatrical failure.

However, this movie strikes the right balance between humorous piss-take and legitimate thrills to develop that kind of devoted fanbase.

The only thing that could keep it from cult status is the fact that it's good enough to be a legitimate hit with audiences immediately.

Death At A Funeral not killer comedy

Death At A Funeral
Director: Neil LaBute
Stars: Tracy Morgan, Chris Rock, Martin Lawrence
Classification: 14A
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕½

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

REVIEW It's never clear why the world needed an American version of Death at a Funeral, Frank Oz's 2007 British comedy, but the result is entertaining all the same.

Collecting an all-star ensemble, the film follows the beleaguered Aaron (Chris Rock) as he tries to bury his recently deceased father while dealing with a number of family issues — not least of which is his resentment of younger brother Ryan (Martin Lawrence), the successful, limelight-hogging author. (Aaron, of course, is an aspiring writer himself, though he hasn't let anyone read his manuscript.)

Transplanting the story from England to Pasadena, Calif., few changes have been made to the plot.

Peter Dinklage even reprises his role as a mysterious guest with information about the deceased he assumes the family would like buried along with him.

While very funny, the film suffers from two distinct problems, the first being its rush to tie up plot lines — or drop them altogether.

After spending most of the film pestering ex-girlfriend Elaine (Zoe Saldana) to take him back, Luke Wilson's character abruptly says he's just going to wait in the car, never to be seen again.

Several other long-simmering family issues are resolved in far-to-brief conversations.

The other problem is Chris Rock himself, who seems ill-equipped to carry the film, even with such a huge ensemble around him. Playing the straight man to so much insanity, Rock feels restrained, his stronger comic abilities wasted.

Tattoo leaves indelible mark

The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo

Director: Niels Arden Oplev
Stars: Noomi Race, Michael Nyqvist
Classification: 18A
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕⊕

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Noomi Rapace, left, plays tomboy-punk heroine in The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo.

Most contemporary American thrillers are models of economy, forgoing extensive character development in an attention maintaining rush to get the meat of the movie.

But the Swedish film has always been a model of restraint, taking its time to gently, effectively dig deep into the human element before unleashing whatever beast it has hidden up its sleeve.

Which is why the highly touted murder mystery drama The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo comes so highly recommended: It's as intimate and detailed as it is epic and jarring.

Based on the posthumously published novel by Swedish mystery writer Stieg Larsson, director Niels Arden Oplev's powerful and very faithful film adaptation stars Michael Nyqvist as shamed investigative journalist Mikael Blomkvist, who is framed for a crime he didn't commit.

As he prepares for his impending prison sentence, a mysterious tattooed, pierced tomboy punk girl is following him.

She's Lisbeth (Noomi Rapace), the dragon inked girl of the title, a brilliant, streetwise computer hacker and would be detective who, after a wealthy patriarch hires Blomkvist to uncover who in his family murdered his beloved, long dead niece, becomes the scribe's partner, in more ways than one.

But that synopsis barely scratches the surface.

The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo is a master class in how to effectively stage a shocker where every faculty is engaged.

Running over two and a half hours, the entire first hour of the film charts the parallel — yet completely alien — worlds that the two protagonists inhabit.

By the time the black as pitch murder mystery kicks in, and by the time these two somewhat wounded people connect to catch the killer, we are in love with the characters and completely understand their motives, weaknesses and, especially with Lisbeth, their breaking points.

Beautifully shot, exceedingly well acted (Rapace is a virtual force of nature), and unbearably suspenseful, the film has come under fire in some circles for its sporadic bursts of graphic, sexual violence.

Yes, the scenes in question are hard to stomach, but that's their intention.

They're never gratuitous and like every other element at work within The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo, they're absolutely vital to fleshing out the narrative.

See this masterpiece before Hollywood gets their mitts on it for the inevitable remake.

Square joins circle of grippy noir

The Square

Director: Nash Edgerton
Stars: David Roberts, Claire van der Boom
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

David Roberts stars in the Australian neo-noir film The Square.

REVIEW Australian brothers Nash and Joel Edgerton have fashioned themselves a tidy little modern noir with The Square, directed by Nash and written by and co-starring Joel.

The film follows Ray (David Roberts), an otherwise reasonable contractor who lets his lust lead him down the path to ruin. The real success of the film's twisting and surprising yet wholly believable plot is that all of Ray's decisions make a stupid kind of sense.

Already having an affair with comely Carla (the awesomely named Claire van der Boom) when the film opens, Ray is looking for a way out of his staid suburban existence and chilly marriage.

After agreeing to take a kickback at his construction breaks the seal on Ray's moral decline, he and Carla hatch a plan to burn down her house and make off with the stolen money her no-good husband is hiding in the ceiling tiles. This being a noir, their plan goes horribly wrong and they struggle in vain to keep their lives from unraveling, growing more desperate with each new twist and discovery.

The best of this genre are, after all, really just cautionary tales to keep the rest of us from dabbling in arson.

Joel's script is tight and thrilling, and Nash's direction makes the tale sing, working finely tuned segments of tension and dread into the bland, bleak suburban landscape.

As Ray gets himself wound up in a dizzying tangle of lies and coverups, the audience is right there with him, shaking their heads at his obvious but plausible missteps.

3-D dollars making up for slump in DVD sales

FILM BUSINESS Extra revenue being pulled in by 3-D movies at the box office can more than make up for the money lost from falling sales of DVDs, according to the CEO of movie studio DreamWorks Animation SKG Inc.

Jeffrey Katzenberg, one of the biggest proponents of the big-screen format, said Wednesday that the 3-D revolution is reversing a decades-long trend that saw Hollywood studios become more reliant on home videos for their revenue and profit than on theatrical releases.

"Suddenly, the theatrical marketplace has turned in the opposite direction," he said in an interview following his appearance at a conference held by the National Association of Broadcasters in Las Vegas.

His company's forecast for its upcoming sequel Shrek Forever After follows the pattern. "Whatever the decline would be for Shrek when it goes to the home video market will be more than offset by the incremental revenue we'll see from 3-D," he said.

But he implored studios to keep up the quality of 3-D movies. He has criticized Warner Bros. for converting Clash of the Titans into 3-D after seeing the success of "Avatar" in theatres using what he called a "quick and cheap post-production process."

"Suddenly, the theatrical marketplace has turned in the opposite direction."
Dreamworks CEO Jeffrey Katzenberg

Clash was shot using regular 2-D cameras, while Avatar was shot with 3-D cameras and had actors don special suits that allowed their movements and expressions to be recreated in 3-D using computer software. All of DreamWorks' animated movies are also created in 3-D from the start. Some critics say the conversion process leads to images that aren't immersive, but look like they are on separate flat planes.

"I just want us all to be cautious and to err to the side of delivering more than expected, not the minimum level or less than expected," Katzenberg said.

'I like holding the gun': Saldana

Avatar star finds her sexy side in The Losers

Avatar and Star Trek actress Zoe Saldana plays a trigger-happy action heroine in The Losers.

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

After last year's Avatar and Star Trek, Zoe Saldana continues her streak of guy-friendly films as tough-as-nails Aisha in The Losers.

And as much as she'd like to play something softer some day, the New York native is more than happy to kick a little butt on screen. "Hollywood has made a living out of portraying women to be such canker sores. We just have to be rescued all the time because we're so incompetent," Saldana says.

"I grew up in Queens in the '80s, where women were the caretakers and they were the soldiers. I'm in that phase right now, so until I burn that, then I'll be the damsel in distress. But, right now, I like holding the gun. I like participating in the saving of the day. I think it's really sexy."

The Losers opens next Friday

The Losers required Saldana to team up with co-star Jeffrey Dean Morgan for both adrenaline-filled fight scenes and a steamy love scene, which she didn't mind at all, she says.

"It helps that Jeffrey was such a gentleman and so respectful because trust me, as a woman, try doing that with a fricking prick," he says. "It's not a good day at work. You're the only one that's naked and you have to act like you're not aware that you're naked. And then, not only that, you have to flip your hair and have an orgasm. So, when you work with a good director and a good actor that makes it seem just like a regular Tuesday, then love scenes are like any other fight scene. They're just awesome."

Being the only woman in the cast, Saldana knew there was a lot of pressure on her.

"You have twice as much work to do because you don't want to be singled out. You're already the only girl. So if you're the one that says, 'I can't do this,' or whatever. It's going to be, 'Oh, my gosh, she's wimping out because she's a girl,'" she says. "I like being around men. I've always felt like I can hold my own."

That male-friendly attitude extended to off-hours activities as well, she admits, especially with the cast and crew on location in Puerto Rico.

"I'm a beer-and-wine kind of girl and I like to unwind with the boys," she admits. "We were staying at this awesome hotel in San Juan and the crew, the team, the cast, we would all just go there and unwind, having Sangria or a shot of whiskey or whatever and you just hit the casinos for two hours and then you go to bed and you study your lines."

J-Lo's Plan working

Jennifer Lopez returns to acting after a four-year hiatus in The Back-Up Plan, also starring Alex O'Loughlin.

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Jennifer Lopez returns to movie screens with The Back-Up Plan, her first film since since 2006's El Cantante with husband Marc Anthony.

But don't call it a comeback. "I don't really think of it that way. I was just home, kind of on maternity leave," Lopez insists. "Now, you know, my first movie's coming out since I was fat."

The Back-Up Plan opens next Friday

The years Lopez spent away from the camera could be considered research for her latest role as Zoe, a single woman who decides to stop waiting for a man and get pregnant through in vitro fertilization. Two years ago, Lopez gave birth to fraternal twins Emme and Max.

"So many things in this movie was art imitating life for me because I had just gone through the pregnancy," she says. "It was really fresh in my mind."

But aside from the whole pregnancy thing, Lopez didn't necessarily have a lot in common with her character. "Zoe and I are so opposite. She was so comfortable being alone, and I'm so uncomfortable being alone," she says. "In a sense it made me admire her. I loved playing her because I envy people like this. I kind of wish I was like her."

Looking at Lopez in The Back-Up Plan, it's hard to tell she had a pair of six-month-olds at home, but she insists recovering her famous curves wasn't easy.

"Getting back into shape was challenging, like it is for anyone who has a baby," she admits.

"The first few pounds drop off really fast, and then you're stuck with those last 10 to 20 pounds. And then you've really got to get disciplined." Having a movie to shoot proved to be the perfect motivation. "That was another level of having to not eat as much," she remembers.

"No bread, no sugar. You really start having to think about those things because being on camera, you have a responsibility to look good. And if you don't, you'll hear about it."

Lopez is continuing her don't-call-it-a-comeback comeback with a new album entitled Love? set to be released this summer. It's been a tough road for Love? after Lopez parted ways with Epic Records and signing with Def Jam Records.

"They've heard what I've been working on already, everybody's very happy with it. We just need to finish it," she says.

Oddball comics making the leap

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

Batman, Superman, Spiderman and Iron Man are the gold standard for comic book characters on the big screen. Between them they have grossed a heroic amount of money, literally adding billions of dollars to box office tallies. They are the bigwigs, the VIPs of the superhero world, but there are dozens of other, lesser known, comic book characters that have made the leap from the page to the stage.

Hit Girl, the ruthless eleven-year-old vigilante played by Chloë Grace Moretz in this weekend's Kick-Ass, might not be a match for Batman's bat-shaped ninja shurikens or his box office pull, but Jeff Moss, the proprietor of Montreal's coolest comic book shop, The 4th Wall, says her story has all the makings of a great movie adaptation.

"For a comic to make a good movie it must have first and foremost good characters," he says. "Also, if the story's not there, it's not going to make a good movie. Next up, it's got to have good visuals and decent "whoa" moments."

The 1999 superhero comedy Mystery Men — based on Flaming Carrot Comics by Bob Burden — works because of the mix of story and offbeat characters. Paul Reubens, for instance, plays The Spleen, a crime fighter who uses turbo flatulence to level his enemies and Leader of the Disco Boys as played by Eddie Izzard neutralizes his adversaries with a can of highly flammable hairspray.

The Mystery Men was turned into a film in 1999.

It doesn't have the all-American heroics of Superman, but Mystery Men has become a cult classic.

Bulletproof Monk, loosely based on Michael Avon Oeming's comic book, delivers on Moss's "whoa" moments. Chow Yun-Fat, hot off of the success of Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, starred as a Tibetan monk who trains a street kid to protect a sacred scroll. Its combination of martial arts and humour didn't score at the box office, but it makes for a good rental.

While it may seem that every comic ever written has been turned into movies — an IMDB search for based-on-comic-book returned 607 titles — not all necessarily lend themselves to the Hollywood treatment.

"Some of my favourite comics that have yet to be made into movies include Preacher, Transmetropolitan, Nextwave, and Bone," says Moss.

"All of these books have rich characters, and amazing storylines, but the sheer size of them (Bone clocks in at 1300 pages, and Preacher runs nine volumes) would require either a series of movies, or a supreme dumbing down of the stories."

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

Flaws keep Captain from taking flight

Captain Abu Raed

Director: Amin Matalqua
Stars: Nadim Sawalha
Classification: STC
Rating: 🌐🌐½

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Clothes — or, rather, a hat — make the man in Jordanian director Amin Matalqua's gentle comedy, in which a widowed old duffer (Nadim Sawalha) becomes a hero to a group of local urchins on account of the pilot's cap that he plucked out of the dustbin.

It's a cute idea, and the scenes in which Sawalha's eponymous protagonist spins barely credible tales of cockpit glory are genuinely charming, with the actor evincing equal measures of mischief and melancholy.

The film stumbles, though, once the deception is revealed and a chastened Abu tries to inveigle himself into the family lives of his young admirers.

The script's focus shifts from a genuinely moving notion — an old man reliving the adventurous youth he never had — towards more conventionally melodramatic territory, and a subplot involving one boy's abusive home life is so overwrought that it nearly scuttles the story altogether.

A scene from Jordan's Captain Abu Raed.

The film's visual equilibrium is similarly disrupted, as the elegant camerawork of the early movements gives way to self-consciously shaky imagery, a sure sign of a director trying to artificially heighten the stakes.

As one of the first Jordanian directors with any sort of profile in North America, Matalqa has the potential to be a relevant figure. Next time out, he needs to show more trust in his material — and in his audience.

Jewish comic-book experience at fest

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

It's a rule of thumb that film festivals are only as good as their sidebar presentations, and by that standard, this year's Toronto Jewish Festival looks to be in good shape.

Curated by Ellie Skrow, People of the Comic Book, considers the influence of Jewish writers, animators and publishers on a century of American popular culture, a mandate broad enough to include screenings of both 1972's X-rated cult cartoon Fritz the Cat and Who Framed Roger Rabbit.

The Toronto Jewish Film Festival runs Saturday to April 25.

Skrow has also lined up an impressive array of guests, including the well-known author — and comic-book expert — Paul Buhle, who will host a panel discussion with the well-known contemporary cartoonists Ben Ketchor and Harvey Pekar at the Al Green Theatre Sunday.

"I seem to have become the go-to guy for this sort of thing," says Buhle, a retired Senior Lecturer at Brown University who has also written extensively about the history of American radicalism and the Hollywood blacklist of the 1950s.

"It's a gigantic question," says Buhle when asked if he can account for the influence and prominence of Jewish artists in the American comic-book industry. "A big part of it is the role that (Jews) played in the pulp magazine trade in New York in the 1910s through the 1940s. It was an industry that was easy to enter into — at miserable wages — and then rise through the ranks — an early parallel to the Jewish role in Hollywood."

On this note, Buhe explains that Who Framed Roger Rabbit is a film with deep cultural resonance.

"It's a film about Hollywood in the late 1940s, and how a shared vision amongst artists of an business independent of the power of the banks was crushed. That's how Jewish victims of the blacklist tended to see Roger Rabbit. It's also a film that marks a turning point in the history of animation, because it showed that animation could be marketed to adult audiences — and thus made The Simpsons possible."

Buhle says that he appreciates TJFF's attempt to extend their programming into the realm of animation, and also in some cases past the screen altogether: space will be be made for an exhibit put together by students from Buhle's former class at Brown.

"It's greatest value, besides showing a wealth of illustrations, is in suggesting what 19-year-old kids are interested in the history of comics," says Buhle. "So sex would be one big topic. I described this class as ten aggressive girls and four nervous boys, so depictions of angst or embarrassment are obviously going to be central."

Who Framed Roger Rabbit will be screened at the Toronto Jewish Film Festival as part of a spotlight on the contribution of Jewish animators and writers to popular culture.

"(The show's) greatest value, besides showing a wealth of illustrations, is in suggesting what 19-year-old kids are interested in the history of comics."

Library Voices overcome fear of pop on debut Denim on Denim

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

We've all got phobias, but this is a new one: A fear of pop music. That's not a clinical fear, of course, but it's something Michael Dawson, organist and guitarist for Regina's Library Voices, had to overcome.

"We had been terrified of the word pop for years," he says. "It was a little too shunned upon for us to take it and run with it."

But you can't keep a good pop song down, and soon enough Dawson ditched playing in "noisy" bands and embraced his love of the Beach Boys and the Kinks and The New Pornographers.

Dawson, and his seven other bandmates, realized that bubbly pop wasn't something to hide from when they did what every 20-something with a vinyl collection does — listen to old records. "We heard these old tracks that we loved over the years and came to the conclusion that there's so much more to these songs than guitar, bass and vocals. It's so dense. Until we were into our 20s we never stopped to consider a harmonica."

"Who knows what will happen. Things started slowly this year, but they're picking up like crazy."
Michael Dawson

It was then the band was born. Library Voices sounds a lot like The New Pornographers — multi-layered harmonies, rich, peppy instrumentation, chants, cheers and male, female vocals. It's incredibly catchy and while the band still have some work to do before they write an album as brilliant as the Pornos' Mass Romantic, their well crafted power pop tunes should only get better with time.

Denim on Denim features multi-layered harmonies, rich, peppy instrumentation, chants, cheers and male and female vocals.

Despite being relative newcomers on the Canadian music scene, they're already garnering a ton of buzz. In 2008 Spin.com listed them as a band to watch and they've shared stages with the likes of Stars and Plants & Animals. Now, with Denim on Denim, their first full length, out, they're starting to see their audiences grow.

"Attendance is picking up," says Dawson. "We've put in the work — over 100 shows last year — and people are starting to take notice."

The more popular they get, though, the more demands will be placed on the Saskatchewan band. Dawson says they're all in for the long haul and the ones that weren't already left the group. "There were 10 of us," he reveals. "But two parted ways. Everyone understands to put music first."

Still, with eight people it's not easy to coordinate schedules. On one seven-week tour, they had to find another drummer, and other obligations have kept band members away here and there. "It's something that has to be catered to each of us, especially when it's costing money," Dawson explains.

With some label interest — he won't say from who — and more work on the horizon it's a good bet the entire Library Voices crew will stick around to see where the music will take them. "Who knows what will happen," he says. "Things started slowly this year, but they're picking up like crazy."

Cancer Bats take cover

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

They've got three successful Canadian albums, Juno and Kerrang! award nomination, but what Cancer Bats really needed was an iconic hit everybody knew.

The Toronto metalhead quartet, famous for their terror inducing name and frontman Liam Cormier's screeching vocals, decided to roll the dice by covering the Beastie Boys' classic track Sabotage on their album Bears, Mayors, Scraps & Bones, which dropped earlier this week.

A risky proposition for a band that, while successful domestically, has yet to really blow up on the world stage: Cormier said the band didn't realize they were treading on such hallowed ground until they did it.

"Well, we came upon it a lot more innocently than people might think," he said. "We just started playing it at live shows. It was a really ballsy cover to take on. I realize that more in hindsight. We we're looking for a cover to add to our set, kickstart the party and do something recognizable for people who haven't seen us a whole bunch."

Bears, Mayors, Scraps & Bones is the new album from Cancer Bats.

It's gone over so far if the critics are any indication — saying that the cover did the track justice with its adrenaline-filled intensity. Indeed the rest of Bears, Mayors, Scraps & Bones has been called the Bats' best album to date and the one truest to their in-your-face live shows. And when it's your third kick at the can, you pick up a few tricks of the trade to do exactly that.

"We wanted to learn from every single mistake we had made from previous records and just crush this thing," Cormier said. "We wanted the drums to be bigger for starters. And we had a lot of trouble on the last record (Hail Destroyer) getting tones down, but we pulled that off this time around.

"From day one, we were more rehearsed and ready well in advance. And we're super-stoked about what we've done."

Music fans celebrate Record Store Day

SoundCheck

On the third Saturday of every April, music geeks celebrate Record Store Day, an annual worldwide event held to remind us of the cultural importance of those places where we've gathered to discover and discuss music. Nick Hornby's High Fidelity will come to life in no fewer than 107 shops across Canada and thousands more around the world.

As a professional music geek — it says so right on my business card — Record Store Day always makes me wax nostalgic about, well, where I've purchased some of my wax over the years.

Irene Pearson's Furniture Store: Although Winnipeg is just 20 miles from where I grew up, its record stores might as well have been on the other side of the planet. Thankfully, Irene had a small box of the latest Top 40 records on the front counter. All my paper route money disappeared into that box of seven-inch singles.

Sam the Record Man: If you're of a certain age, there's a 99.9 per cent possibility that you bought music at one of Sam Sniderman's stores. I discovered new wave through a Devo 45 playing in a store in the Garden City Shopping Centre.

Sound Exchange: Two blocks away from the University of Winnipeg is a crowded musty shop filled with trade-ins. Not wanting to pay full price for a record by a band I'd never heard on the radio, I was able to check out Joy Division's Unknown Pleasures for two bucks.

Record Peddler: Customers at the long-gone location across from Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens had their selections brutally critiqued by whoever was manning the cash register. I'm still gutted that I didn't buy an obscure 12-inch EP by a group called 69 Tribe featuring a song called Bikers.

Rough Trade: Almost 10 years ago I asked Nigel, an affable chap behind the counter at the Notting Hill branch, for something new and interesting. He handed me De Stijl from the White Stripes. "They're gonna be mega," he said.

Amoeba Records: This is THE place to go in L.A. Always pay very close attention to the staff picks on the end-of-aisle displays.

Thousands of shops around the world are preparing to mark Record Store Day this Saturday.

Keeping up with the Joneses: Oliver after third Juno Award

PEOPLE There's a good reason 75-year-old Montreal pianist Oliver Jones cherished the chance to release an album with 91-year-old Hank Jones.

"It's not often that I get the opportunity to play with musicians that are older than me," a laughing Oliver Jones told The Canadian Press.

"It was quite a thrill for me."

Also a thrill? Jones' chance to win a second consecutive Juno Award for traditional jazz album of the year for the resulting collaboration between he and the elder Jones (no relation).

The Juno Awards air Sunday on CTV

It's Oliver Jones' 10th career Juno nomination, and he's already won two trophies. If he wins this one, he'll want to thank the other Jones — who won't be present at the show — and then another legendary jazz pianist whose presence looms over the album: Oscar Peterson.

Peterson, who died in 2007 at age 82, was Jones' mentor, neighbour and friend with a relationship that spanned more than 70 years. And he served as the partial inspiration behind his latest heralded work.

Sex charge halts Seagal show

Production of a television show featuring reserve deputy and movie star Steven Seagal will be suspended "for the time being" as Seagal faces sexual harassment allegations, a suburban New Orleans sheriff said Wednesday.

Jefferson Parish Sheriff Newell Normand said the continued video recording of the reality series, Steven Seagal Lawman, would be a distraction for the department in light of allegations made against Seagal by a woman in a California civil lawsuit.

Kayden Nguyen, a 23-year-old model, sued Seagal for $1 million on Monday in Los Angeles, alleging he sexually harassed her and engaged in sex trafficking. Her lawsuit claims Seagal hired her as an executive assistant and flew her to Louisiana while he was making the reality series and repeatedly groped and fondled her.

Steven Seagal

She claims she was kept at a house in Lafitte, La., for several days and that Seagal repeatedly fondled and groped her, touching her genitals and breasts without permission. She claims two other women were kept at the house and were used by the actor for sexual purposes.

She also claims Seagal forced her to take illegal prescription medications and that she repeatedly complained to others on Seagal's staff but wasn't allowed to leave the home.

Seagal's attorney, Marty Singer, denied the allegations and said in a statement that Nguyen was fired for illegal drug use.

Friendship unites band

Call them country music's young guns, a new generation of stars who are bound not only by chart-topping talent but by friendship.

Chances are you've heard one of their songs on the radio recently and they'll be hard to miss Sunday during the Academy of Country Music Awards in Las Vegas after dominating nominations.

The group swirls around a nucleus of Miranda Lambert and Lady Antebellum's Hillary Scott, fast friends whose positive energy draws in others like moths to a flame.

"I think it's cool because it just kind of started all the sudden," Lambert said. "The new generation is starting to really show what we're about and it's cool that we're really fond of each other genuinely. It's really not about competition with us. We're all happy for each other."

The Country Music Awards air Sunday night on CBS

The group includes Scott's bandmates, Charles Kelley and Dave Haywood, and Lambert's boyfriend, Blake Shelton. Scott has been friends with Taylor Swift since country's golden girl was 14. Lambert and Carrie Underwood are buds, too.

Add in Luke Bryan, David Nail and Ashley Monroe and you've got a regular posse. So far the friendship has spawned hit songs and a lot of fresh ideas.

"Everybody's just kind of working for each other and pulling for each other," Shelton said. "That helps a lot. This business is so competitive. When somebody is doing real good and has your back that's one thing, but when everybody's doing real good, kind of shoving each other along, it makes it that much stronger a force."

And a force it is.

Lady A, riding the crossover success of its latest, Need You Now, leads all nominees with seven. Lambert and Underwood are up for six awards and Underwood could become the first woman to win entertainer of the year twice. Swift, the sensation whose multitude of trophies includes entertainer of the year at the Country Music Association Awards, has five nominations.

MICHAEL BUCKNER/GETTY IMAGES

Lady Antebellum's Hillary Scott and fellow country music star Miranda Lambert are good friends despite competing for awards at the Academy of Country Music Awards.

Bryan's already won the fan-voted top new solo vocalist of the year, with the help of a hilarious video spot that included some of his buds, and is now up for top new artist. And Nail received his first nomination this year for Red Light in the single record of the year category.

"I'm so proud of my friends," Scott said.

"We all really care about each other and enjoy each other's company and it's not competitive," Scott said. "I think if anything everybody's trying to make and write the best music they possibly can and push each other to be better. It's healthy competition instead of a cutthroat, 'We're better than you' thing. It's really fun."

V is for... a very interesting role

NEW SERIES There was a time when playing a priest on TV was a heavenly assignment.

These days, after weeks of headlines dealing with decades of abuse within the Catholic Church, drawing the priest role on TV can be pure hell.

V airs Tuesdays at 10 p.m. on ABC and A

Which is why Joel Gretsch is happy to be playing a noble if complex man of the cloth in the sci-fi drama V.

Gretsch is no stranger to sci-fi (or events such as Comic-Con) after feature roles in The 4400 and the Steven Spielberg miniseries Taken.

He says Father Jack Landry is the kind of priest he remembers when he was growing up in a small town in Minnesota.

The 46-year-old remembers attending leadership camps, "and was always around priests playing softball and going to mass and, you know, legitimate things about what it's like to be a priest," he told a small group of international reporters recently in Los Angeles.

He still sees the priesthood as "a very interesting, wonderful, noble thing to do and it's a complex thing to do."

That's certainly the case for Father Jack Landry on V. The series, a remake of an early '80s effort, is about an advanced alien species who invade earth, hovering over 29 cities around the world in gigantic space ships.

They seem to come in peace but, as the series unfolds, it becomes clear that their motives are far more sinister.

Morena Baccarin plays Anna, the beautiful and charismatic leader of the extra-terrestrial visitors, while FBI counter-terrorism agent Erica Evans (Elizabeth Mitchell, also seen on Lost) is among those who suspect these charming visitors have a hidden agenda.

Gretsch's Father Jack is a former U.S. Army chaplain and is one of the first to discover these visitors may not be the benevolent saviours they make themselves out to be.

The arrival of these aliens from another world at first leads Landry to a crisis of faith.

"He's a studied guy," Gretsch says of his character.

"To become a priest, you are reading a lot of literature, and you have to understand what was written in the past about God and your relationship to God."

When the aliens show up and start offering cures for many human ailments, it shakes Landry's understanding of a higher power and his own place in the universe.

"How do you equate that with God?" Gretsch asks. "They come here with all the technology to help people and people are looking to them as saviours. It's very upsetting for my character."

He realizes that many viewers, especially those who have read the recent headlines, are going to bring their own feelings to the role and that's fair, he says.

"I can only draw off of what I had in my life and how I was raised and my relationship. So it's a wonderful, complex role for me to do, and it's a difficult thing to talk about."

A dog's life can help a human one

DOCUMENTARY Jennifer Arnold spends her life breeding, training and matching service dogs for people with disabilities or special needs.

It was her own quest for a dog that saw her through her darkest years when she was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis and her father's death dimmed her chance for independence.

"I remember not wanting to leave the house," she said. "I felt very awkward, scared. It surprised me how frightened I was to be left alone. You feel so vulnerable."

Arnold has written a book, Through a Dog's Eyes, that comes out in September.

A PBS documentary based on the book and narrated by Neil Patrick Harris debuts April 21 (check local listings for time).

GETTY IMAGES

Neil patrick Harris narrators the doc Through a Dog's Eyes.

Harris, star of How I Met Your Mother and a dog owner, said he was "wildly moved" by the documentary about the bond between the service canines and the people they help.

"You can see it in the faces of these dogs," he said.

Arnold was 16 and carefree, enjoying life with her mother and eye-surgeon father in Atlanta.

Then doctors said she had multiple sclerosis and she found herself in a wheelchair. Her father tried to get her a service dog, but she was far down on the waiting list.

So they decided to set up their own service dog training school, Canine Assistants, an academy her father planned to fund by delaying his retirement. Three weeks later, he was hit and killed by a drunken motorcycle driver.

But Arnold and her mother didn't abandon the dream.

They went to work and raised money for the school. It took 10 years, but they incorporated on Dec. 31, 1991, and started training their first dog in March 1992.

Canine Assistants is now among the largest service dog providers in the country.

Through a Dog's Eyes looks at Arnold's treat-based teaching methods. The film focuses on five people, their families and the dogs.

In the last 20 years, Canine Assistants has given away 1,000 dogs; there is a waiting list of nearly 2,000.

The organization does not charge for the dogs, and will pay for food and vet bills for the life of the dogs, if needed. The recipients are asked to do community service in return.

1 Juno Awards

MUSIC Canada's recording industry gathers on The Rock this weekend for the 2010 incarnation of the music awards. The show will feature more than a dozen acts, and include segments shot live on George Street in downtown St. John's, N.L. CTV will air the show and stream it on its website, CTV.ca.

2 Girl With the Dragon Tattoo

MOVIES With the Swedish film opening in Canadian theatres this weekend, Hollywood is busy speculating on who will star in an American-version of the movie, based on a book trilogy by Stieg Larsson. Among the names being thrown around to play the lead role is Kristen Stewart — who is no stranger to trilogies thanks to the Twilight books.

3 The Bedwetter, by Sarah Silverman

BOOK There is a wonderful disclaimer from publisher Harper Collins at the start of Silverman's book: If you are offended by stripping naked in public, or stabbing your boss in the head by a writing implement, then this book may not be for you. If you aren't in any way nauseated, then you should buy it. I guess Silverman knows her demo.

4 Hollywood Hellraisers

POP CULTURE Tiger Woods and Jesse James may be the new bad boys of celeb gossip, but they're nothing compared to some of Hollywood's past hellraisers. In his book, Hollywood Hellraisers — now in paperback — Robert Sellers examines the fast times of Marlon Brando, Dennis Hopper, Warren Beatty and others.

5 Conan O'Brien

TV Late night's dethroned prince is returning to the realm of 11 p.m. this November, after the red-haired host signed a deal with TBS for a new talk show. The news came as O'Brien started his two-month comedy tour across Canada and the U.S. As always, he added a bit of humour to his announcement: "The good news: I will be doing a show on TBS starting in November! The bad news: I'll be playing Rudy on the all new Cosby Show," he Tweeted.

6 Xavier Dolan

AWARDS It's been quite the year for the Quebec filmmaker. On Monday the phenom director of I Killed My Mother (J'ai tué ma mere) received the Claude Jutra Award from the Academy of Canadian Cinema & Television, and now its been announced his second feature, Les amours imaginaries, will be screened at the Cannes Film Festival.

Cameron lauds decision to delay bids on Amazon dam

Director James Cameron is applauding a Brazilian judge's decision to temporarily halt bidding on a huge hydroelectric dam, yet he warns the fight is not over in what he calls a "real-life Avatar" battle in the Amazon.

Avatar director James Cameron.

A federal judge in Para state on Wednesday delayed the April 20 auction for construction of what would be the world's third-largest hydroelectric project.

He said more time was needed to examine claims that Amazon Indians living near the site weren't consulted about the project and that insufficient environmental protection measures were put in place.

"It's a small victory for us, but I don't expect the battle is over," Cameron told The Associated Press by telephone from the small Amazon city of Altamira, where he was lending support to project opponents.

Government lawyers were analyzing the decision Thursday and will appeal it soon, said a spokeswoman for Brazil's solicitor general's office. She spoke on condition of anonymity due to department policy.

President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva strongly supports construction of the Belo Monte dam, arguing it will help Brazil meet its ever-growing energy needs. Silva on Wednesday also criticized international pressure to stop the dam project.

"No one worries more about taking care of the Amazon and our Indians than we do," Silva said Wednesday in a speech in Sao Paulo.

Silva also said, without mentioning Cameron by name, that people from developed nations should not lecture Brazil on the environment because those countries spent centuries destroying their own forests.

Find tranquility off-the-beaten path

No cruise ships or spring-breakers: Oaxaca offers beaches, eco-tours, markets

In the small Mexican beach town of Mazunte, there are no cruise ships calling, no college-age hooligans binge drinking and no towering hotels in all-inclusive resorts.

No, none of that.

Instead, in this sunbathed town on the Pacific Coast of the southern Mexican state of Oaxaca, locals come to dip in the ocean. Fishermen unload cases of sharks in the morning. Kids play beach soccer, with sticks in the sand for goals. Dirt roads lead to the shore. Locals lounge on hammocks, their houses a few hundred yards from the beach.

"I didn't want to go to Cabo San Lucas and drink my face off in an all-inclusive resort," said Sarah Evans, 41, from British Columbia, while she sunbathed. "It's tranquil here. But it's not exactly off the beaten path. There's a lot of tourists here."

Indeed, Mazunte isn't exactly isolated. Foreigners — Italians, Argentinians, Canadians among others — have come here for years, and many have stayed, opening up cabana hotels, restaurants and bars. A steady stream of bohemian backpackers, couples and retirees dot the beaches. There's a diverse range of attractions, but not just for tourists. In Oaxaca, Mexican life is lived right in front of you.

One of the largest states in Mexico, Oaxaca has sky-high mountains, arid valleys, lush tropical forests, cloud forests and beaches next to steep rocky hillsides that clash into the ocean.

There's loud, glittering and elegant Oaxaca City, with a bustling colonial centre. Around it are smaller towns, many featuring their own attractions, from textile-weaving to shops manufacturing mezcal — the iconic Oaxacan alcoholic drink made from the maguey plants.

There are the markets in the city and in smaller towns, where hundreds of people descend to browse a cornucopia of goods, including the culinary staples Oaxaca is best known for: Oaxacan chocolate, mezcal, string cheese, fried grasshoppers and mole.

There are the ruins of ancient civilizations. Monte Alban, the centre of the Zapotec civilization, sits atop a hill in the valley, just outside the city, with towering stone buildings and pyramids. On the other side of the valley, the ruins at Mitla feature the remains of the Mixtec civilization.

While Mazunte is still home to fishermen, the town has been dramatically changed by a ban on hunting sea turtles and crocodiles enacted about 20 years ago. Now, the former turtle hunters have turned to eco-tourism. The Mexican government runs the National Mexican Turtle Center, which ensures that the creatures of the land are preserved along with the beauty.

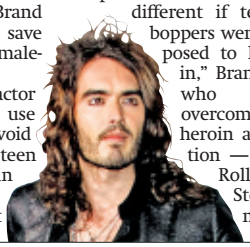
Say yes to drugs, kids

IT'S PART OF RUSSELL'S THEORY OF EVOLUTION Russell Brand thinks heroin would save the music industry, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The British comedy actor claims heavy drug use could help the world avoid the "awful music" teen stars such as Justin Bieber are releasing.



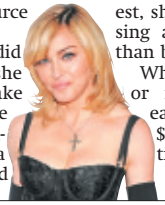
"The top of the hit parade would look very different if teenyboppers were exposed to heroin," Brand — who has overcome heroin addiction — told Rolling Stone magazine. "It would weed a lot of them out. I don't think Justin Bieber could handle Syd Barrett from Pink Floyd's habit.

"A lot of people in their journey to rehab overdose, and then, perhaps, we could be spared their awful music. It's Darwinian. It's the law of natural selection." METRO NEWS SERVICES

Decidedly not Gleeful

HONESTLY, DOES THIS WOMAN HAVE ANY SENSE OF FUN? While hit TV series Glee will be paying tribute to Madonna next week with an episode devoted to her music, the Material Girl herself won't be tuning in, according to Popeater.

"Madonna doesn't have a TV and has no idea what Glee is," a source says.



"The show did ask her if she wanted to make an appearance in the much-hyped Madonna episode. She said 'no thanks' and, to be honest, she would rather they sing an Elton John song than butcher one of hers."

Whether she watches or not, Madonna will earn a reported $100,000 US in royalties from the episode. METRO WORLD NEWS

HOPE THIS ISN'T TRUE. THE SMALL-BREASTED LADIES OUT THERE WILL BE DISAPPOINTED After splitting up with Alex Rodriguez, Kate Hudson has been missing in action.

According to Us Weekly, that's because she's been recovering from breast augmentation surgery to enhance her bust. The actress went under the knife in late March, according to the magazine.

"Kate makes jokes about her boobs, but her chest has always been one of her biggest insecurities," a source says. METRO WORLD NEWS

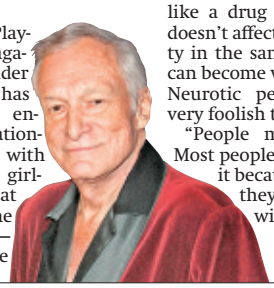
Oh The Hef is wise in his ways

AND THOSE WAYS ARE KNOWING A THING OR TWO ABOUT SEX AND WHAT DRIVES MEN (HINT: SEX) Hugh Hefner doesn't believe in sex addiction, femalefirst.co.uk reports.



The Playboy magazine founder — who has famously enjoyed relationships with multiple girlfriends at the same time — claims the condition is just a "cop out" excuse for adultery.

"I think 'sex addiction' is a convenient phrase for what is really an obsession," he said. "Sex is not like a drug or alcohol. It doesn't affect the physicality in the same way. But it can become very obsessive. Neurotic people can do very foolish things.

"People make choices. Most people who cheat do it because they think they can get away with it." METRO NEWS SERVICES

Pattinson was recently spotted at Meester's New York apartment.

"He ducked out of the building and hopped into a waiting car. He apparently spent the night with Leighton, and didn't want anyone to know," a source says, adding that their alleged affair has included steamy text messages as well.

"She's having a texting romance with him, and is so into it. She talks with Rob almost daily." METRO WORLD NEWS

Metro Recipe of the Day

Turkey Kebabs with Fennel and Red Pepper Relish

INGREDIENTS:

1 lb (500 g) boneless skinless turkey breasts
3 garlic cloves, chopped
1 1/2 tbsp (20 m') lemon juice
2 tbsp (25 ml) dry white wine
1 tbsp (15 ml) chopped fresh sage, or 2 tsp (10 ml) dried sage, crumbled
1 tbsp (15 ml) chopped fresh rosemary
1 1/2 tsp (7 ml) fresh thyme leaves, or 1/2 tsp (2 ml) dried thyme
1 tsp (5 ml) fennel seeds, lightly crushed
2 1/2 tbsp (40 ml) extra-virgin olive oil
1 red pepper, seeded and finely diced
1 fennel bulb, finely diced
1 tbsp (15 ml) tapenade, or 10 black kalamata olives, pitted and finely diced
8 shallots or pearl onions
Salt and fresh-ground black pepper

METHOD

1. Cut turkey into 24 pieces, each about 2 x 3/4 in. (5 x 2 cm). Combine turkey pieces with 2 garlic cloves, 1 tbsp (15 ml) lemon juice, wine, sage, rosemary, thyme, fennel seeds, 2 tbsp (25 ml) olive oil and salt-and-pepper seasoning. Toss turkey pieces to coat with herb mixture. Leave to marinate at least 10 minutes.
2. Meanwhile, make relish. Put red pepper, fennel, tapenade or diced olives, remaining garlic, 1/2 tbsp (7 ml) lemon juice and 1/2 tbsp (7 ml) olive oil in medium bowl and stir. Add salt and pepper to taste; set aside.
3. Preheat broiler to high or light barbecue. Thread marinated turkey pieces onto skewers. Add one shallot or pearl onion to each.
4. Broil or barbecue kebabs, turning over and basting with marinade, 15 minutes or until turkey is cooked through and lightly charred in spots. Serve kebabs hot with pepper relish.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
You are determined to change your life for the better, but don't try to change everything at once. Too much effort could do more harm than good.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
You may find it more difficult than usual to control your desires today but you need to be aware that if you go too far you could burn yourself out.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Stand outside yourself and see your problems for what they really are. In the greater scheme of things they hardly matter at all.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
It may seem as if a loved one is withholding their affection but they just think you want to be left alone.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
Believe it or not, everything that happens in your life takes place at just the right time. So ask yourself: why are certain things happening right now?

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
The mind is a powerful tool and if you tell yourself that a task is going to be unpleasant you will create the conditions that make it unpleasant.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
You may be convinced that a certain viewpoint is right but how do you convince others, especially when the evidence seems to point in a different direction?

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
Scorpio is ruled by both Pluto and Mars, planets that don't take prisoners, and you will be noticeably more assertive over the next 24 hours.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
You are right to be so positive and optimistic, but there is still a lot of ground to cover between here and the place you want to be.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
You must expect some rather sharp criticism today from people who envy your abilities. Don't get involved in a war of words.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
It may seem as if you have gone as far as you can go with a project, but don't give up on it yet. Something will happen soon that reignites your enthusiasm.

PISCES ♓
